HYATT CHURCH SHOWS WEALTH OF GROWTH Shabby Little Building Replaced

by Present Splendid Structure.

INTERESTING PASTORS

Co-operation of Congregation Has Greatly Aided in Development.

More possibly than any other branch of Methodism in the city, Hyatt Avenue Church can show mute evidence of its progress. Where other new churches have sprung up, the humble building in which the congregations had their origin have become but a memory. On a sunny day, however, the shadow of the tall Hyatt Avenue Church falls not very far distant from the time-worn shabby little building where the congregation was given birth. The first Hyatt Avenue Church, known, however, as Hamilton Road Church, has had a colorful career. Built originally for a church, it became later a dance hall, and is at the present time in use as a billiard room. The new home of the congregation is two blocks northwest, fronting the Hamilton road, with as handsome and fine a building as could be desired. The transition from one of the state of the stat transition from one to the other is one of the milestones in the career of a church which is the center of Methodism in the large Hamilton road community.

Hyatt Avenue Methodist Church is this year celebrating its jubilee. It has seen fifty years of steady, useful service, constantly advancing with the growth in population in its district. This growth demanded in 1907 the abandonment of the old Hamilton Road Church and the creation of a with the constantly increasing con-gregation. The little church had seen faithful adherents of Methodism seen faithful adherents of Methodism come to it Sunday after Sunday for 37 years, the children who had been baptized and christened there were sending their own children for the sacraments, and the older members left for their new home with just a tinge of regret that they were to sever such dear associations, although the old home was hopelessly inadequate and out-of-date.

But the career of the Hamilton road congregation in the new church built on Hyatt avenue, fronting Ham-ilton road, opposite Redan street, has been one of success and pros-perity. Family after family has set-tled in the district and become adherents of it, until now at the Sunday school alone the services of thirty teachers are required for the large number of children who attend.

Mr. McCormick's pastorate here has been featured by a series of Before coming to Hyatt Avenue has been featured by a series of special services, in which services of an industrial nature have been stressed. Matters of civic interest have also been introduced at the church, and one Sunday evening service, the slogan of which was "A Better London," was conducted by Better London," was conducted by Mayor Wenige and representatives of the city council. Members of the Sherlock-Manning Company presented another special service, as did the McClary people. A recent Sunday evening service took the form of a temperance meeting in which a temperance meeting, in which John Joynt of Toronto, member Mr. John Joynt of Toronto, member of the provincial legislature and an avowed prohibitionist, gave the special address. Leading temperance workers and social service workers were on the platform with Mr. Joynt. These services, all of a progressive character and indicating interest in the leading social problems of the day, have been a great source of inspiration to the Hyatt Avenue consistency.

Even the tiny tots who make up the junior congregation are indicative of the regularity and enthusiasm of the older members. The congregation numbers about one hundred and meets every Sunday morning at the same time as the regular service, and the church service is conducted for them in their own department and in manner which will appeal especially to childhood. The leaders of the junior congregation are Mr. Wilfred Laing, Mr. Jack Brooks, Mr. Murray Barr, Miss Vera Tisdale, Miss Ora Hoffman, Miss Lotta Fisher, and Miss Jenny Dockstader.
