

THE WINKERS ARE NOT BECOMING

And they're attracted attention at the Madison Square Theatre. From the New York Sun, Jan. 2. Madison square theatre was thronged last night by a fashionable audience, who for some time listened to the Private Secretary. Seated in an ornate box, and by his side dressed in an evening suit, was a young man, a remarkably pretty young man, neatly but not richly attired. The young man wore a flowing beard and moustache, which became him so badly that the audience were attracted by them. Whenever the young man moved, the beard and moustache seemed to be displaced. The audience soon lost all interest in the play, and gazed with astonishment at the beard and moustache. So great became the interest that the actors noticed the manager, who quietly invited the young man into the office. Capt. Williams and Police-man Trigg were there when the young man entered, and he was soon arrested, and the flowing beard and moustache and arrested the remainder of the young man.

In the Thirtieth street police station the young man, who felt his position keenly, refused to give his name, business or address. He said he had accepted the position of a young woman in the theatre against the wishes of his family and friends. He was greatly attached to the young woman, who was poor and respectable, and declined to say who she was. He said his parents were wealthy and well connected, and he had adopted the disguise, hoping he would not be recognized. Capt. Williams looked the young man up. He had a costly watch and a well filled purse and a knife. The latter was taken from him. A card in his pocket-broke, the name of Emmanuel S. Williams. The young man followed the policeman to his cell without making any protest.

"It's young lady," said Capt. Williams, "was not detected, and doubtless when the play was added wondered what had become of her bearded companion. Catcher—A New Treatment. Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has been achieved in modern medicine has been attained by the Dixon treatment for catarrh. Out of 300 patients treated during the past six months, fully nine per cent. have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less a remarkable record, and one that has led to the regular practitioner being untried, while the most successful of our advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the most scientific and the most successful of modern medicine, the Dixon treatment is a practical cure, as it is effected by his four years' experience. No one else has ever attempted to cure catarrh in this manner, and no other has been so successful. The application of the remedy is simple, and the cure is permanent, and the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers, who are desirous of permanent relief, should correspond with Mrs. A. H. DIXON, 200 King Street West, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for literature on catarrh.—Montreal Star, 26

"Blame it all on me!" From the Detroit Free Press. A grand oration— a shower of flying splinters—bump! bump! and the coaches settled back on the rails and the passengers picked themselves up and cried out to each other that there had been a collision. So they had. Freight train 17 was pulling in on the side track, but the day express thundered down on her, while the long train was yet a third of its length on the main track. Some one had blundered. Some one's watch was off time. Some one must be held responsible for the accident. Under the overturned locomotive was the fireman—dead. Near him was the engineer, plumed down to the frozen earth by one of the drivers, and when he had been revived a doctor, who was among the passengers, knelt beside him and said: "Arm broken—leg broken—foot crushed to a pulp. He cannot live."

"Who had blundered? Who had disobeyed orders?" The conductors of the two trains were comparing watches and orders when the engineer beckoned them. "I alone am to blame!" he whispered. "I wasn't due here until 10, and it was just 10:05 when the freight train pulled in. I was ahead of time—running on her time."

"So it was—so it was," whispered the two conductors. "This morning when I left home," continued the engineer, "the doctor was kept. Our little Jennie—our 5 year old girl—was sick with colic. In my delirium she kept crying out: 'Don't go, papa—don't leave little Jennie to die! It was like a knife in my heart to leave her, but I must. I was leaving the house when the doctor put his hand on my shoulder and said: 'Tom, my boy, by God, I don't know how nursing she'll stand, but she'll get better.'"

"What a long day this was to me!" he went on after a pause. "I pulled out of the depot tonight, headed for home and Jennie, I wanted to fly. I kept giving her more steam, and kept rattling on my time. We aren't due here until 10:05, but I wanted to be in at 6—yes! an hour before that. When the thought came to me that Jennie might be dead when next I entered the door I should have pulled the throttle wide open if the fireman hadn't grabbed my arm."

"For me!" he whispered, as he shuddered with pain and seemed to be exhausted. "Yes, blame it all on me!" he whispered. "No, 17 had five minutes more to get in, and she had made it all right, but I stole her time. And now—and now—"

He lay so quiet for a moment that the doctor felt for his heart to see if it still beat. "And now—that's her—that's Jennie, she's beckoning—she's calling! Right down the track—over the high bridge—through the deep cut—I'm coming—coming!" And men wiped tears from their eyes and whispered: "He has found his child in death!"

SAVING THE COLORS

How the French Ninety-ninth Aveland One Regiment at Sedan. The Ori de Peuple publishes the following reminiscence of Sedan: After the surrender of Sedan all the French regiments were ordered to turn over their colors to the Prussians. The officers of the ninety-ninth regiment of the line decided to avoid such a humiliation. They agreed to bury their colors in the garden of an inhabitant of Sedan, who formally engaged himself upon his honor not to divulge the secret. All the officers took an oath to keep the secret, and it was understood that after the war a delegate from the regimental officers should be sent to the garden to find and restore the regimental colors and the eagle, Capt. Baraton, one of the officers of the ninety-ninth, went the next day to the owner of the garden where the colors had been buried. He dug out the colors and carried them away. About a fortnight afterward Capt. Baraton presented himself to General Le Flay, then minister of war, at Paris, and related the following narrative of his adventures: "During the night I disguised myself in a pair of brown trousers and a blue gingham blouse, I put on a peasant cap and wooden shoes. I wrapped the regimental colors round my body and the eagle in a Prussian sash and managed to reach the banks of the Meuse, where I was guarded by three companies of sentinels. I was fired at, but although wounded, succeeded in plunging into the river and swam across to the opposite bank, thoroughly prostrated with fatigue and loss of blood. I concealed myself in the woods of Daubigny and Ligny. Soon German cavalry passed through the woods. I was hunted by the militia like a wild beast and passed twenty-four hours without eating or drinking. At last I managed to reach the Belgian frontier at Stuy, and thence I passed into France again and the by the canal to Paris. Here are the regimental colors, which I now hand to you."

Gen. Le Flay embraced the brave captain and at once named him Cavalier de la Legion d'Honneur. The Cheapest and Best. On account of its purity and concentrated strength and power over disease, Backdock Food Bitters is the cheapest and best blood cleaning tonic known for all disordered conditions of the blood, liver and kidneys. A Fish Story. "Don't flounder around so!" said the grabbed mackerel. "Shut up or I'll whale you!" said the other. "Not a word do you say!" asked the mackerel. "Not a word do you say!" replied the other. "I beg you be clam, gentlemen," entreated a lobster. "Or get out of hot water," cried a sheepshead, in his moustache, and all went for currents.

Ayer's Hair Vigor for dressing the hair and promoting its growth: an indispensable toilet article. Another Sample Case. "There are some awfully mean men in this city, and don't you forget it!" he said as he got a fresh brace for his back against the dead wall. "Anybody been swindling you?" "I beg you to name them. The man next door to me didn't look out for his pan stock when the cold snap came on, and the result was a freeze-up which has lasted for a week."

"But how does that affect you?" "Affect me! Why, our water was shut off for non-payment, and when he had been relieved a doctor, who was among the passengers, knelt beside him and said: "Arm broken—leg broken—foot crushed to a pulp. He cannot live."

"Who had blundered? Who had disobeyed orders?" The conductors of the two trains were comparing watches and orders when the engineer beckoned them. "I alone am to blame!" he whispered.
