SAVING MANHOOD

The work of the Military Hospitals Commission embraces everything which can be done for the recovery, comfort and usefulness of the brave men who have been discharged from the army because of injuries which...

Not the least important part of this work is to provide every man with instruction in some remunerative employment by which he may be able, with returning health, to earn for himself a comfortable living.

Many of them will find it impossible to revert to their previous occupation, and none of them will desire to live an idle life and be a burden on their relations or friends.

France and Belgium, as they were the first of the Allies to see the sad havoc which war was making among their own men, were the first to see the necessity of this vocational training.

A visit to the School organized in a part of the building of the Grey nuns of Montreal, which has been kindly offered for this purpose, will be of great interest. Here are convalescent soldiers learning carpentry, one of them at least with Dr. Amar's hand equipment attached to his working arm; others have chosen the barbers' art; others are practicing shoe-making...

One man with Dr. Amar's equipment is practicing on the violin. Others with a view to a college course are studying Latin and Greek, under a Lieutenant who is a graduate M.A. One man who was a day laborer and returned from Flanders incapacitated, is now a draughtsman in the employ of the Bell Telephone Company, and is earning about double of his former income.

Others are connected with business classes preparing for future employment in commercial life. Some who have already taken the course have now engaged by big corporations and private concerns. Telegraphy is also taught.

Examples of the carpentry work done in the Grey Nunnery school were recently on exhibition at the Arena, and orders were looked sufficient to occupy the time of the men thus engaged, until Christmas. Twenty-five per cent of the money obtained in this way is retained by the School for cost of material and oversight.

CLARENCE BORDEN OF TUPPERVILLE KILLED BY TRAIN

This community was shocked last Thursday morning when it was learned that Clarence Borden, son of Mr. William Borden of Tuppersville, had been killed early that morning, at Ariville, near Halifax, while in the performance of his duties as brakeman on a D. A. R. freight train.

He had been on top of one of the freight cars and in some unaccountable way fell between two cars, four or five cars passing over his body, mangling it badly.

A younger brother, Ralph died from the effects of a shell shock at the front a few months ago, and another brother, Fred, is now at the front, having enlisted in the First Contingent.

The surviving members of the family are the father, two brothers, Fred and Oliver, and two sisters, Jennie and Rena, who have the sincere sympathy of all in their sad bereavement.

The funeral took place on Sunday afternoon with a service in the Central Baptist Church. A special train placed at the disposal of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, ran from Kentville to Ariville, on board were members of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen, and Oddfellows from Kentville, Berwick, Kingston, Middleton and Bridgetown to the number of over two hundred.

Upon arrival at Tuppersville the members of the fraternal orders presented formal in procession to the funeral home and marched to the home of the deceased, whence they escorted the body to the Baptist church and to the cemetery nearby. The service in the church was conducted by Rev. G. C. Warren, who gave a brief but strong address. The choir furnished music, the singing of "Some day he silver cord will break," by Louis Brooks, being rendered with good effect.

Hiawatha Lodge, I.O.O.F., Kentville, of which the deceased was a member, conducted the service at the grave. Mayor Polson acted as Noble Grand and Rev. W. R. Turner, of Middleton, taking the chaplain's part. The service was most impressive. Among the beautiful floral tributes which bore silent testimony of esteem and affection for the departed, was a broken wheel from the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, wreaths from the B. L. F. E. Order of Railway Conductors, and Hiawatha Lodge and a pillow and wreath from the railway staff at Kentville.
