

and besides his regular school-work he has done a grandly faithful work in the East End Mission of which he has had charge. He is a friend to everybody except the idler, and is the very embodiment of pluck, push and principle.

PORT HOPE sends us George H. Sneyd, of whom nothing is so characteristic as are hard work and genuine whole-souled manliness. Three years of most unrelaxing study have brought him to the end of his Woodstock career. Who has not a friend in George? and who can fail to be his friend? His years at Woodstock have been pleasant, and we know that many have been encouraged to persevere by the examples he has set. If this same untiring zeal follows him through life, its influence must be far-reaching.

J. H. CAMERON, a Cameron of Clan Cameron, and worthy of the name, spent his boyhood in Osgoode, Carleton Co. He has shown himself not wanting in that energy and perseverance which characterize the young Scotch-Canadian. After a short career as "knight of the birch," he entered Woodstock in September, '91. Throughout his course he has steadily forged ahead, till now he stands in the front rank of the noble grads. of Woodstock, and, if we judge aright, J. H. has before him a distinguished scholastic career. He leaves with the hearty good wishes of all.

E. W. BROWN, who has spent several years in the ranks of the teaching profession, is an Oxford boy. It would be no exaggeration to say, "He is as regular as clockwork and as true as steel." The greater part of his time in the College has been devoted to the delights of the classics, and if faithful work will accomplish anything, we have little fear of failure in his case. While regretting his departure from us we hope to have the privilege of frequently seeing him.

FRANK H. KARN, the only son of our esteemed citizen and friend of the College, D. W. Karn, is light-hearted, buoyant and good-natured. His enthusiasm for science and manual training does not prevent his taking a high standing in all his studies. He intends pursuing his studies in applied science at McGill. Many a time have we kept step to Frank's marches as we left the chapel for our classes at nine o'clock. While we can no longer claim him as a student, we hope he will favor us with frequent visits.

A FEW OTHERS.

Besides the graduates, there are a few other students taking a final leave of Woodstock, a half-dozen of whom should have special mention here:

ARTHUR CREASY is an Englishman and likewise an old teacher. In his six months at the College he has covered a great field of work. Here we have a self-made man. Coming from England when but a small lad, he set himself the task of acquiring an education, and he can well say to others:

"Is Learning your ambition?
There is no royal road,
Alike, he peer and peasant
Must ·iimb to her abode."
