BLUE BOOK OF AMATEUR PHOTOGRAPHERS AND BRITISH SOCIETIES. Edited and published by Walter Sprange, London, Eng.

As its name suggests, this work is a directory of the various photographic societies of England and the British colonies, and is a most interesting volume of some five hundred pages, giving the names of all English and colonial photographic societies, when organized, place and date of meetings, and a complete list of officers and members of each society, with their addresses. The Blue Book also contains two very interesting illustrations from negatives by the author, and a quantity of useful information in the shape of tables, formulas, postal rates, etc. The price in blue cloth, limp binding, is $1.25. It can be ordered direct or through this office. We understand that Mr. Sprange will publish in May a companion Blue Book of the Amateur Photographers of the United States, which will include a full list of Canadian amateurs, and will be duly noticed in these columns.

The Kodak Girl.

To the Eastman Kodak Company we are indebted for a handsomely framed picture, in color, of a very chic young lady, dressed in walking costume and kodak, that almost necessary addition to a toilet nowadays. We understand the young lady is presented as on her way to the World's Fair to see how many pictures can be obtained for two dollars. She has shown her wisdom in the selection of her camera, and we wish her luck.
