

The prime of seasons, prime of days,
At length has come, in pride array'd
The Rocks avoid the solar blaze,
And seek a refuge in the shade.

"Man v hands make light work."

Now, if you have a heavy job to do, call all hands and despatch it; but stop! too many cooks always spoil the broth. There are some who cannot bear to work alone. If they have a yard of cabbage to hoe, they must call in a neighbour to change work. Even this is very pleasant, but it tends to lounging and idleness, and neglect of business; for we cannot always have our neighbours at work with us. We shall relin at working alone, and if we can get no one to come to us, we shall be away, leaving our corn, potatoes, peas and beans to take care of themselves. "Bugs, b. sgs, bugs! O, the bugs will eat up all the cucumbers!" No, they will not, cousin Betty, if we attend to them. We must be up in the morning, eye in the morning, thrumming and drumming till high twelve, like captain Dashup's girls, who are and jews harps—I say we must be up before the sun kisses the pine tops, and sc to these bugs and pinch their necks for them.
