

(3) it is not likely that any change in his condition will occur through serving any sentence that the Court may impose.

---CROSS-EXAMINED BY THE PROSECUTOR:

Q-143 Would you be in a position to state whether the accused is responsible for his actions? I mean, he is being charged with desertion, and he states he doesn't know what he is doing. Could you give an opinion whether or not he would be responsible for his actions? Is he in that condition that he wasn't responsible?

A- I think he was responsible.

Q-144 You think he was responsible? You think that he realizes what he has done and is responsible for his actions?

A- Yes.

---The Defending Officer declines to re-examine.

---BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q-145 Major Lawson, would you say that this man, from what examination you have made of him, is apt to have these urges to go some place and not be able to know what he was doing until he had gotten away? Is that natural for a person suffering---

A- I don't think so, sir. I think that these urges are present, but they are the same as other urges that everybody has. There is a great variation in the amount of opposition that can be made to these urges. It varies in different people; but I don't think there is any question of any clouding of consciousness. I think his mind is clear, though the urge may be very strong to go.
