HAVE YOU FORGOTTEN !

Have you forgotten the sunny glade, Down by the little spring, And the spreading oak tree's leafy shade, Where first the wild birds sing? And the hill where the purple violet blue, With the wood lily's snowy bell, And where the mint and rushes grew, In the green and mossy dell-?

Do you remember the swing we made Or wild and bending vine? And I sat and sang 'neath its leafy, shade-For a merry heart was mine; And the bench on which you carved my name, Beneath the walnut tree; Far dearer is that rustic seat Than a royal throne could be !

The flowers bloom as sweet and fair. The wild birds sing as sweet, And the brook rolls on its silv'ry waves O'er the pubbles at my feet ; But I've sat opon its banks and tried To feel as gay in vain-

Returning home late one night, jaded by a list.

Less stroll through the town, I found the junior member of the firm awaiting for me. The house had received intelligence, after business hours, or a transaction entered into on their account, which required the immusliate transmission, to an isolated inland town, of several thousand dollars, together with certain papers and statements necessary to conclude the affair. It was too important and caught at the envelope, Meanwhile, there was matter to be entrusted to the delay and uncertainty of the mail at that time. Upon a consultation of the firm, I had been selected to perform it was to unfasten it, I hurried back to my own down upon its knees, and clasping its little that it would be such a recreation as would divert my thoughts for a time from the perplexities of my inserable condition.

With the usual foresight of the firm, everything harrassed me. I looked at the monorandum on the back of the envelope. It was "5,000." The letter was open before me. I read it over. It named five thousand at the sum enclosed. There had been pre-actions were placed in my hands in an envelope, again and again I counted it.
