Gustave Gissler, the German belonging to Stockton, who is also engaged in searching for the treasure, was away at Puntas Arena, on the Costa Rican coast, with Gus Livingstone, one of the Victoria sealers who was left there by the Aurora expedition, after provisions. Capt. Whidden, the other Victorian left by the Aurora expedition, had also left the island. The only people on the island were two Germans, the wife of one of them and the wife of Gissler. As soon as Harford went ashore he covered his face with a handkerchief, but Mrs. Gissler knew him at once and shouted to him: "I know you, Harford: it's useless for you to cover up your face, and don't you dare to put a spade in this island." No heed was, however, taken of this and the sailors dug as stated without result.

This, however, is not a final search, for it is the belief of many of those on the Imperieuse that had the war ship stayed a. few days longer the treasure Vancouver. would have been found. Many say that H.M.S. Amphion has been ordered to Cocos Island to search for the buried millions, but this is denied by Admiral Palliser. He says that she is going to San Jose de Guatemala to relieve the flagship, and if her services are not wanted there she will go southward, but no further than Coquimbo. If she goes to Cocos Island she will be acting without orders. Harford was landed at Guatemala on
