RUTLAND, Vt., Dec. 14, 1881.

I consider your Arnica and Oil Liniment a wonderful curative for man or beast. One of my horses wounded my leg severely with his toe cork, and came near breaking the leg bone by plunging onto me. The gash was fearful to behold. A few applications of the Arnica and Oil Liniment cured me. I cannot speak too highly in its praise. I use it in my livery stables and believe it the best liniment in the market. Every family and stable-keeper should keep it on hand ready for immediate use.

S. H. SCOFIELD.

COVINCING TESTIMONY.

I met with a severe accident October 5, 1881, and dislocated my shoulder. The doctors I sent for were not able to set and keep it in its proper place, and after suffering with it in this condition 121 days I went to Boston, and at the city hospital Dr. Thorndike broke the shoulder from its new adhesion in the hollow of the arm, and set it in its proper place and there kept it. But the cords had so contracted that the arm could only be straightened at a right angle. The cords seemed as so many iron wires, holding the arm as so many braces. I had all the old remedies applied, such as wormwood and vinegar, brandy and arnica, but all to no special effect. We had a little of your Arnica and Oil Liniment. This seemed the best of anything to relax the cords. I found but one drug store where it was kept, and I had obtained the little they had and I asked them why they did not keep it. They said, "We did not know it was worth much," and were glad to hear my testimony. Since I told them they have sent to Boston for it and have sold lots of it. But I could not wait, as some doubts were expressed about my arm, except I should be etherized and have the cords broken from the muscles.

But knowing a little of the virtue of your liniment I sent to you for six bottles, and before the second one was used the cords were relaxed and my arm straightened without any pain, and now my arm is as limber as ever.

Allow me to say we use your Arnica and Oil Liniment as a common remedy, for cuts, bruises, burns, stitch or crick in the back, and, finally, as a remedy in case of all outward trouble and can say we feel no need of keeping anything to supply its place, neither do we think there is anything that can do it. My doctor approves of it most heartily. Yours truly,

Rev. D. GOODHUE, Pembroke, N. H.
