Rev. Dr. Talmage Speaks Eloquently for Courtesy.

ONE OF BEST OF ROYAL GRACES.

By the Exercise of Courtesy in an Age When Bluntness Has Been Canonized as a Virtue the Man Becomes Thoughtful For Others.

Washington, Jan. 12. In this discourse Dr. Talmage urges thought-fulness for others and shows how such a benignant may be fostered; text, I Peter ii, 8, "Be courteous." In an age when bluntness has been canonized as a virtue it may be useful to extol one of the most beautiful of all the royal family of s, deference to the wishes ers, good manners, affability, ingness to deny ourselves newhat for the advantage others, urbanity. But what is the use of my defining the grace of Congressman David F. courtesy when we all know so well what it is? The botanist might say some very interesting things about a rose, and the chemist might or a chemist we know what a rose is and what water and light are. nothing of genuine courtesy either in our makeup or in our demeanwe have letters from thirtyeight members of Congress attestwith the virtues of Peruna.

> heart by the power of the Holy Chost, who has transformed and il-Ghost, who has transformed and illumined and glorified one's nature. Mark you, I am speaking of the highest kind of courtesy, which is Christian courtesy. Something like it—ordinary politeness—may grow up with us under the direction of intelligent and watchful parentage, but I am not speaking of that which is merely agreeableness of conversa-tion and behavior. All that may be a matter of tutelage and fine surrounding and show itself in lift-ing the hat to passersby and in a

a man when their carriages met on the road. The rufflan, knowing Mr. Wesley and disliking him, did not turn out, but kept the middle of the road. Mr. Wesley cheerfully gave the man all the road, himself riding into the ditch. As they passed each other the ruffian said, "I never turn out for fools," and Mr. Wesley said, "I always do." I like the reproof which a in San Francisco gave an American The American pushed him off the sidewalk until he fell into the mud. The Chinaman on rising began to brush off the mud and said to the American: "You Christian; me heathen. Goodby." A stranger entered a church in one of the cities and was allowed to stand a long while, although there was plenty of room. No one offered a seat. The stranger after awhile said to one of the brethren. "What church, is this?" The answer was, "Christ's church, sir." "Is he in?" said the stranger. The officer of the church understood what was meant and gave him a seat. We want more courtesy in the churches, more courtesy in places of business, more courtesy in our homes. But heart courtesy must precede hand and head and foot courtesy. Cultivation of it should begin in the father's house. You often notice that brothers and sisters are often gruff and snappy and say things and do things that they would not have the outside world know about. Rough things are sometimes said in households which ought never to be said at all teasing and recrimination and fault finding and harsh criticisms, which will have their echo thirty and forty and fifty years afterwards. In the sleet driven by that east wind no sweet flowers of kindness and geniality will grow. Let children hear their parents picking at each other, and the found picking at each other, and far down the road of life will be some the same disposition to nick seen the same disposition to pick at others. Better than this habit

rod. Better a shower that lasts a few minutes than the cold drizzle our first home, however many homes

Let us all cultivate this grace of Christian courtesy by indulging in the habit of praise instead of the habit of blame. There are evils in the world that we must denounce habit of blame. There are evils in the world that we must denounce and there are men and women who ought to be chastised, but never let us allow the opportunity of applauding good deeds pass unimproved. The old theory was that you must never praise people lest we make them vain. No. danger of that. Before any of us get through with life we will have enough mean and ignoble and depreciating and lying things said about us to keep us humble. God approvingly recognizes a system of rewards as well as of punishments. In the cultivation of this habit of Christian courtesy let us abstain from joining in the work of defamation. Every little while society takes after a man, and it must have a victim. If you had a roll of all the public men of this generation who have been denounced and despoiled of their good name, it would take you a long while to call the roll. It is a bad streak in human nature that there are so many who prefer to believe evil instead of good concerning any one under discussion. If a good instead of good concerning any one under discussion. If a good motive and a bad motive have been possible in the case in hand, one man will believe the conduct was inspired by a good motive, and ten men will believe it was inspired by a bad motive. The more faults a man has of his own the more willing is he to ascribe faults to

What a curse of cynics and pessiis clear under ground and a vy stone is on top of him heavy stone is on top of him there is no possibility of his ever coming up again as a rival. Some of the epitaphs on tombstones are so fulsome that on resurrection day a man rising may, if he reads the epitaph, for the moment think he overshadowing pyramid of Egypt, has not with its lips of stone spoken one word in thousands of years.

There are two sides to every man's character—a good side and an evil side. The good see only the good and the evil only the evil, and the probability is that a medium oping the right only one most of the pignetary system; he will live as

and the evil only the evil, and the probability is that a medium opinion is the right opinion. Most of the people whom I know are doing about as well as they can under the circumstances. When I see people who are worse than I am, I conclude that if I had the same bad influences around me all my life that they have had I would probably have been worse than they bably have been worse than they now are. The work of reform is now are. The work of reform is the most important work, but many of the reformers, dwelling on one evil, see nothing but evil, and they get so used to anathema they forget the usefulness once in awhile of a benediction. They get so accustomed to excorlating public men that they do not realize that never since John Hancock in boldest chirography signed the Declaration of Independence, never since Columbus picked up the floating land flowers that showed him he was coming near some new country, have there been so many noble and splendid and Christian men in high places in this country as now. You could

Christian men in high places in this country as now. You could go into the President's Cabinet or the United States Senate or the house of representatives in this city and find plenty of men capable of holding an old fashioned Methodist prayer meeting, plenty of senators and representatives and cabinet officers to start the tune and kneel with the penitents at the altar. In with the penitents at the altar. In all these places there are men who could, without looking at the book, recite the sublime words, as did Gladstone during vacation at Hawarden, "I believe in God, the Father Almighty, Maker of heaven earth, and in Jesus Christ," and from the senate and house of representatives and the Presidential Cabinet and from the surrounding offices and committee rooms, if they could hear, would come many voices responding "Amen and amen!"

Christian courtesy I especially com ates. Almost every person has some one under him. How do you treat that clerk, that servant, that assistant, that employe? Do you accost him in brusque terms and roughly command him to do that which you might kindly ask him to do? The last words that the Duke of Wellington uttered were, "If you please."
That conqueror in what was in some respects the greatest battle ever fought, in his last hours, asked by his servant if he would take some tea, replied, "If you please," his last words an expression of courtesy. Beautiful characteristic in any class. The day laborers in Sweden, passing each other, take off their hats in reverence. There is no excuse for boorishness in any circle. As complete a gentleman as ever lived was the man who was unhorsed on the road to Damascus and be-headed on the road to Ostia—Paul, the apostle. I know he might be so the apostle. I know he might be so characterized by the way he apologized to Ananias, the high priest. I know it from the way he complimented Felix as a judge and from the way he greets the king, "I thank myself, King Agrippa, because I shall answer for myself this day before thee touching all the things whereof I am accused of the Jews, accordingly, because I know thee to be of etiquette, although such books have their use, but from a mind full of thoughtfulness for others and a heart in sympathy with the conditions of others. If those conditions be presperous, a gladness for the success or if the conditions be depresscess, or if the conditions be depressing, a sorrow for the unfavorable circumstances. Ah, this world needs lighting up! To those of us who are prosperous it is no credit that we are in a state of good cheer, but in are in a state of good cheer, but in the lives of ninety-nine out of a hun-dred there is a pathetic side, a taking off, a deficit, an anxiety, a trouble. By a genial look, by a kind word, by a helpful action, we may lift a little of the burden and partly clear the way for the stumbling foot. Oh, what a glorious art it is to say the right word in the right way at the How reprehensible the behavior of those who pride themselves on the opposite quality and have a genius for saying disagreeable things, using sarcasm and retort not for law-ful purposes, but to sting and humil-iate and hurt! "Didn't I take him down?" "Didn't I make him wince?" "Didn't I give it to him?" That is the spirit of the devil, while the opposite is the spirit of Christ. The time must come when the world will acknowledge international courtesy. Now courtesy between nagreeting, but as soon as there is a difference of interest their ministers plenipotentiary are called home, and the guns of the forts are put in posi-tion, and the army and navy get ready. Why not a courtesy between nations that will defer to each other and surrender a little rather than have prolonged acrimony, ending in great slaughter? Room for all na-tions of the earth and all styles of government. What the world wents is less armament and more courtes, less of the spirit of destruction and more of the spirit of amity. This armies in the field and too many men-of-war on the ocean. Before the century closes may the last cavalry horse be hitched to the plow and the a man rising may, in the pittaph, for the moment think he got into the wrong grave. Speak well of one another, and if you find yourself in circles disposed to slander and abuse be for the time as dumb as the sphinx which, though only a few yards away from the only a few yards away from the ciation of what a man is, of what a woman is. We cannot expect perfection, but in almost every one there is something good and worthy of the planetary system; he will live as long as the Almighty lives. Started, he will never stop. Your Christian courtesy may be his eternal rescue. To the young let me say: Sow courtesy, and you will reap courtesy, sow hostilities, and you will reap hostilities. Get your heart so right that it will make the tones of your voice persuasive and your salutations on the street and your greetings at the door of home and church and hall a blessing to all, and the kindly influences you throw upon them will rebound upon your own heart and life. While you are making them happier you will make your self happier.

If others lack courtesy that is no reason why you should lack it. Respond to rudeness by utmost affability. Because some one else is a boor is no reason why you should be a boor. But how few show urbanity when badly treated! Human nature when badly treated! Human nature says, "An eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth, retort for retort, slander for slander, maltreatment for maltreatment." But there have been those you and I have known who amid assault and caricature and in-justice have maintained the loveliness of blossom week in springtime Nothing but divine grace in the heart can keep such equilibrium. That is not human nature until it is transformed by supernal influences. To put it on the lowest ground you cannot afford to be revengeful and malignant. Hatred and high indignation are stages of unhealth. They enlarge the spleen; they weaken the nerves; they attack the brain. Rage in a man is one form of apoplexy your body and mind and soul, and you have not such a surplus of vigor and energy that you can afford sacrifice them.

So I applaud Christian courtesy. I would put it upon the throne of every heart in the world. The beauty of it is that you may extend it to others and have just as much of it yea, more of it—left in your own heart and life. It is like the miracle of the loaves and fishes, which, by being divided, were multiplied until twelve baskets were filled with the remnants. It is like a torch, with which fifty lamps may be lighted and yet the torch remain as bright as before it lighted the first lamp.

But this grace will not come to its coronal until it reaches the heavenly sphere. What a world that must be where selfishness and jealousy enver entered and never will enter! No struggle for precedence. No rivel. never entered and never will enter! No struggle for precedence. No rival-ry between cherubim and seraphim. No ambition as to who shall have the front seats in the temple of God and the Lamb. Courtesy there easy, because there will be no faults to overlook, no apologies to make, no mistakes to correct, no disagreeable—contain on ness to overcome, no wrongs to and taken right. In all the ages to come not a detraction or a subterfuge. A perfect soul in a perfect heaven. In will never be necessary to repeat the words of my text, words that now need oft repetition, "Be courteous."

"An optical illusion," explained you believe you see, but which you "Yes, I know," exclaimed Johnny, beaming. "That's wot paw seen when he didn't see snakes."
