Mischievous Lambs

The goat is well known to be a creature of diabolic ingenuity in mischief and no respector of dignity. A goat, and no respector of dignity. A goat, it is reported, once eluded the sentinel outside Napoleon's tent, entered the imperial precincts, and quietly and completely devoured the chapeau of the conqueror, all but the cockade, which it was still champing when the owner awoke, with a satisfaction he did not share. A goat once butted a British general while he was inspecting a comp kitchen and knocked his. ing a camp kitchen, and knocked his monocle into a kettle of stew. An irreverent kid (not human) on an

Red-Tape Humor.

One of the most curious and amusing instances of the fussiness of red tape came from an English officer who was sent on a special mission to Liverpool. In his account of expenses,

A cliff swallow will eat a thousand fleas, mosquitoes, wheat midgets or beetles that injure fruit trees in a day, and, therefore, is to be encouraged. This bird is also known as the eave swallow because it plasters its nest on the outside of a barn or other building up under the eaves. Colonies of several thousand will build their nests together on the side of a cliff. These nests, shaped like a flatiened gourd or water-bottle, are made of bits of clay rolled into pellets and lined with straw or feathers. This bird winters in the tropics.

Correcting Sights of Rifles. A GENTLE LAXATIVE

The number of improperly sighted iffes throughout the country is surprisingly large. It matters not how accurate a rifle may be, it is worth-less if it is not properly sighted—if it shoots too far to right or left, too low or too high.

Correcting false sighting in rifles is not a difficult task, provided the breech block is removable and a clear vision can be had through the bore of the rifle barrel. The horizontal adjustment of sights is the most difficult task, provided the result of clogged bowels and sour stomach. The most necessary and the best medicine for little ones.

cult and requires some provisions previous to making the adjustments.

The rifle barrel should be detached, breech block removed, and a tight fitting wooden trough made to hold the rifle barrel. The trough should be made of three pieces of one-inch rifle barrel. The trough should be made of three pieces of one-inch board. The bottom piece should be as wide as the thickness of the bar-rel and the two sides should be nailed on just high enough to clamp the bar-with a flat top, and secure it to the top of the post by driving a nail through the bottom of the trough, and into the top of post. Lay the rifle bar Lip-Reading.
