Frieda Rolfe used to just read about unemployment Now she's helping find solutions

"I used to read about the problems young people were having. I wanted to help but there didn't seem to be anything I could do. Now I'm studying the problem...doing computer research on the problems of unemployment."

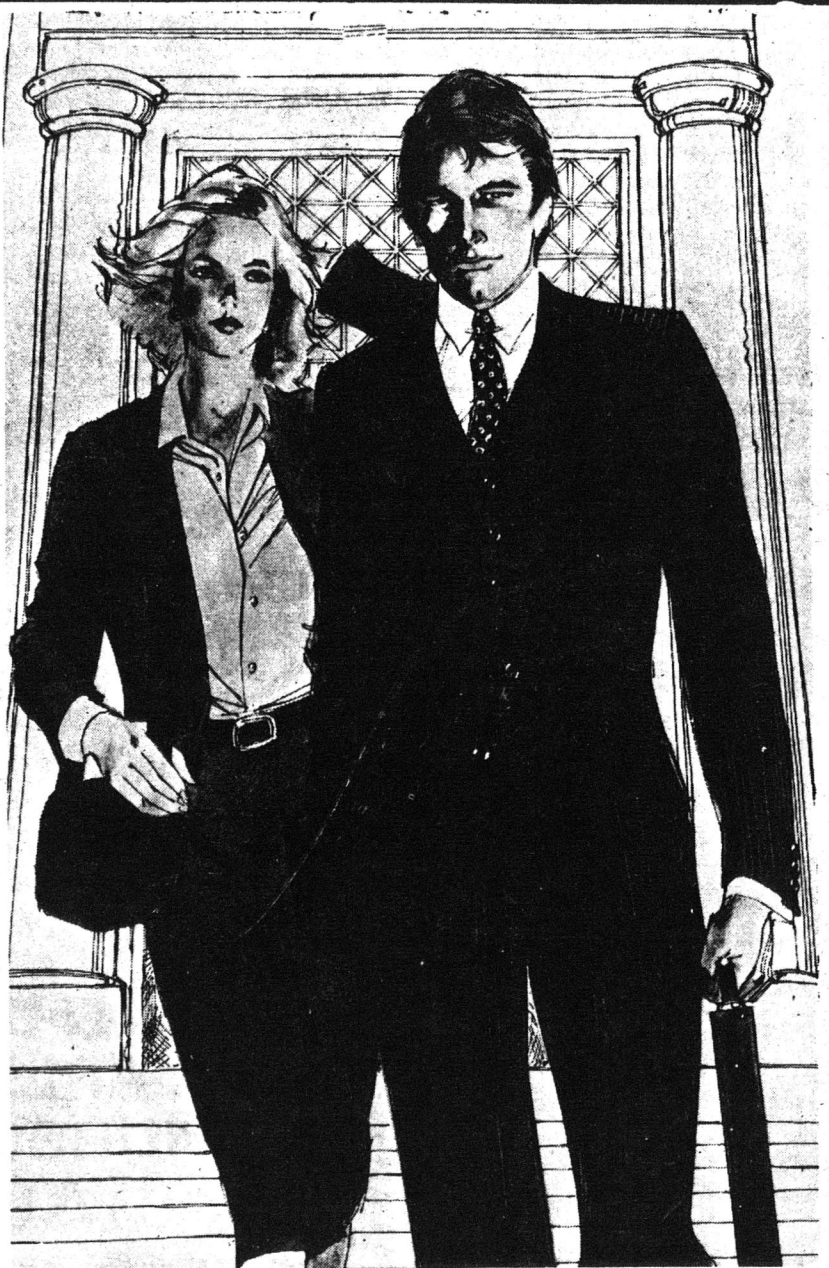

The applied research program put Frieda in the driver's seat. She's taking courses in human relations, statistics, research design and computers. Doing surveys through the college's Applied Research Centre. Becoming part of a professional team working together to help find solutions.

Applied research. Talk to us about your future.
