

at any bank; also both the principal and interest can be collected only by the registered owner. These three kinds of bonds may be had in denominations of $50 and upwards.

How to Buy a Bond.

A large selling organization, under the direction of stock and bond brokers, and all banks, will sell Victory Bonds for the Government. When the purchaser of a bond gives his money to the bank for the Government in full payment of the amount of his application, he receives his fully paid Victory Bonds. Victory Bonds may be bought with paper money or coins, or the buyer may draw a cheque on his bank to pay for them. In the latter case, the money is simply transferred on the books of the bank from the account of the purchaser to that of the Government. It remains in the keeping of the bank until required for Government purchases. Then the proper Government official pays it out by drawing a cheque. Many of the manufacturers and merchants who receive cheques from the Government immediately deposit them into their own bank accounts. Thus a man may provide funds for the Government by simply drawing a cheque, and his money may be used to pay for war material without ever leaving the bank.

Why More Interest is Paid on Bonds Than on Savings Deposits.

As most people know, a person who deposits money in the Postal Savings Bank, or any savings branch of a chartered bank, receives only 3 per cent. interest on it. One reason why he receives only 3 per cent., while the purchaser of a Victory Bond receives $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent., is because the bank will pay the money out at any time, while the owner of a Victory Bond has lent his money to the Government for a term of years. There is always a ready market for Victory Bonds, so that those who have loaned their money to the Government and desire to withdraw it before their bonds mature, can obtain their funds by selling the bonds through a bank or bond dealer at small expense.
