

The stern-wheel river steamers keep the farmers in close touch with New Westminster's famous market.

These ships are loading canned salmon for London and other markets, and incidentally having their hulls cleaned free of charge by old Father Fraser.