The Every-Day Darling. ANONYMOUS,

She is neither a beauty of genius, And no one could call her wise; In a crowd of other women She could draw no stranger's eyes; And e'en we who love her are puzzled To say where her preciousness lies.

She is sorry when others are sorry, No sweetly one likes to be sad; And if people around her are merry, She is almost gladder than glad. Her sympathy is the swiftest, The truest a heart ever had, She is just an every-day darling— The dearest that hearts ever had.

Her hands are so white and so little, It seems as if it were wrong They ever should work for amoment; And yet they are nimble and strong. Whenever a dear one needs helping, She will labor the whole day long, This precious every-day darling— Each day, and all the day long.

Ah ' envy her, Beauty and Genius, And women the world calls wise; For the utmost of all your triumphs Would be empty in her eyes. To love, and be loved, is her kingdom— In this her happiness lies. God bless her the every-day darling ! In this her preciousness lies.

NEWS FROM IRELAND.

DUBLIN.

DUBLIN. On August 21st, a little fellow named Hughes, aged eight years, residing in Bridgefoot-street. Dublin, accidentally fell noto the River Liffev, at Usher's Island. The tide was at the flood, and the boy immediately disappeared in the muddy water. An alarm was raised, and a man water. An alarm was raised, and a man named Chr.stopher Horan, in the employ-ment of Messrs. Courtney, ironfounders, Dunmanway, on the 18th August last, of a man named Daniel Crowley from a house and farm held from Daniel Connor, heroically jumped into the river, although he was an indifferent swimmer. He caught of Mauch. The sub-sheriff, with a large force of police, went to take possession of the house and found the doors barricaded, the boy, who was then much exhausted, and held him above the water while the and held him above the water while the people on shore untied the life-buoy, but unfortunately, in the excitement, the per-son who threw the life-buoy forgot to hold the rope which is attached to it, and the ders were prepared to resist. Four of the believe were prepared to resist. Four of the policemen went to attack the door, but hot water was thrown out, and they had to retire. A heavy iron bar was then ap-plied as a sort of battering ram, and the doors were beaten in. The police finally buoy floated down the river, leaving Horan struggling gallantly with the lad in his arms. He was obliged at last to relin-quish the little fellow, who then sank, and was not afterwards seen alive. His body not recovered for two hours after-ds. Horan himself was with difficulty forced an entrance, and found the four wards. Horan himself was with difficulty rescued by means of a pair of 1 eins, and was in a very weak condition. One of the most galling incidents of the olice rule in Irelrnd is the appearance of a brace of sub-constables at every railway station on the arrival and departure of every train. Of course, the Government when questioned about the matter have a very innocent explanation of a practice which would not be tolerated for a day in any free country. They say that they send the police to the stations for the purpose of catching criminals. But a document just presented to Parliament on the mo-tion of Mr. T. D. Sullivan effectually exposes the hollowness of this pretence, and shows that the number of criminals arrested at the Irish railway stations during the last twelve months was only 68, and that of that small band no less than 18 were captured near Ennis-probably on the occasion of the elections. These facts carry with them their own comment. They w thaf the police at the railway stations have, ordinarily speaking, no legitimate duty to discharge. The truth is, of course, that they are posted there in accordance with the desire of the bureau-cracy in Dublin Castle, to make the people feel that they are at every turn under the heels feel of the governing power, and that they cannot escape the surveillance even when cannot escape the surveillance even when travelling on their lawful business.

CARLOW.

CARLOW. Mr. Henry Birkett, a gentleman who had spent nearly all his life in Carlow, met his death by drowning in the River Burrin, close on the borough boundary, a band was heard appproaching, and in turning to look in that direction, he over-balanced himself and fell backwards, his neck coming in contact with a stone, and, as is supposed, injuring the spinal cord. Paralysis resulted immediately, and he was carried home insensible to his residsecure his own safety. TYRONE.

The two rifles taken were recovered in a field adjacent to the barracks, and many believe that the affair does not deserve the serious aspect placed upon it by the au thorities. From the evidence adduced i would appear that the barrack orderly, who is a married man, was away at his house, a few yards from the barracks house, a few yards from the barracks, when the robbery was effected. It is the general belief that the act was committed for the wanton purpose of getting the or-derly into trouble. No arrests have been
