STATISTICS OF CHINESE ARMY

Each Province Has Its Own and Each C. O. Independent of Central Govt.

Peking, March 7 (Correspondence of the Associated Press)—Before the outbreak of the Yunnan revolution the total reported strength of the Chinese army was 481,300. Of these troops 82,000 were reported to be in Chi-li, which is the province in which Peking is located. Kwangtung province, in which Canton is located, had 38,800 according to the last official report and was third in military strength. Kiangsu Province, in which Shanghai and the very important strategic city of Nanking which commands the Yangtze valley are located, was second in military strength with a total of 434,500 troops. Hunan province, immediately south of Chi-li province, which is the home of President Yuan Shih-kai, was fourth in military strength with 34,500 troops.

Yunnan and Szechuen provinces, which are now figuring so prominently in the revolution, had a much less military strength at the time this last report was made, but many troops have been moved recently and the military forces at Szechuen are now probably three times the 17,000 troops reported a few months ago. Yunnan province, when this report was made, had 21,400 troops. At the time the revolution broke out, it was generally estimated that 30,000 soldiers joined the revolutionists and deserted the government. Recruiting has been going on at a lively rate since the revolution, and the number has now probably been greatly increased.

One of the great weaknesses is that each province has its own army, and to a great extent each commanding general is a potentate quite independent of the central government. The co-relation of the provincial army has always been a very difficult task. Commanding officers frequently display very great independence, and there is constant fear in Peking lest some commanding general like Feng Kuo-chang, who is in charge of the important garrison at Nanking, shall desert the government and join the insurrectionists.

Old Age Finds Its Greatest Comfort

in good eyesight. Reading or sewing are practically the only diversions of most old people, and unless they are able to enjoy these pastimes in comfort life holds but little for them.

Be sure that the "old folks" in your family have the opportunity to enjoy this blessing to the full. They cannot have it without good glasses—glasses selected at random or by "trying on" will not give it to them.

Bring them here and have an accurate examination of the eyes made. You may be surprised to find they had forgotten what really perfect vision is.
