HIGH LICENSE. We are at a point in reformatory movements in this country when it is propos-

of ardent spirits. The first has been tried by compelling the merchant thereof to pay a large sum, say five hundred dollars, as a license. It is said that this will have a tendency to close up the small drinkeries which curse our cities, and only a few men can afford to sell intoxicating drinks.

This money, raised by a high license, it is said will help support the poorhouses where there are widows and orphans sent by dissipations of husbands and fathers. This high tax will help support the prisons in which men are incarcerated for committing crimes while drunk.

How any man or woman in favor of the great temperance reform can be so hoodwinked as not to understand that this high license movement is the surrender of all the temperance reformation for which good men and women have been struggling for the last sixty years, is to me an amazement that eclipses everything. "High License is the monopoly of Abomination."

We must realize that the one result of this high license movement, and the one result of the closing of small establishments,-if that were the result-is to make run-selling and rum-drinking highly respectable. These drinkeries are so lisgusting that a man will not risk his reputation by going in them; and if a young man should be found coming out from one of those low establishments he would no damage, while the whiskey sale does.' That surrenders the whole subject. If rum-selling is right, let all have the right, and if it is wrong, five hundred dollars are only a bribe to the government to give a few men a privilege which it denies to the great masses of the people.

Life is made up, not of great sacrifices or duties, but of little things, in which smiles and kindnesses, and small obligations, given habitually, are what win and preserve the heart and secure comfort. True, unchangeable love remodels our characters, removes the weed of selfishness, making us live for something better than ourselves, makes us see new beau-
