

to give orders for flowers and mosaics to M. Baihaut, whom she forgot to pay.

In 1870, during the siege of Paris, she was living at Versailles, where she was very intimate with a Prussian officer. In the spring of that year Madame Della Torre was dismissed from the hotel Splendide hotel de Bristol after having run up bills, which she failed to pay. She ordered 13,000 francs' worth of lingerie at the shop of M. Don-oct. M. Albinet, a jeweller in the rue de Choiseul, suspected her of having stolen from him a ring worth 150 francs. In 1873, Madame Della Torre was condemned to prison for three days by the police court, for an impropriety. In June last the Countess rented the furnished hotel No. 10 rue Lesueur, at 800 francs a month, and established herself therein with fifteen dogs and seventeen cats. Her only resources apparently, were derived from a sum of 130 francs a month received from Italy. By stating her income as much larger, and making a skilful use of her name and title, she obtained a large credit. The complaint against her was made by nine tradesmen whom she had deceived.

At the trial, Madame Della Torre asserted that she had some means in Italy and produced papers to show that she had influential relations with many persons of her family. She denied that she had any intention to defraud her creditors.

After hearing M. Mariage for the prosecution, add M. Mont du Taigny for the accused, the court sentenced the Countess Della Torre to one year's imprisonment, and to pay a fine of 500fr.
