The Montreal Star reports that the local market for cheese, although not characterized by any decided increase in activity, rules very firm, as all authorities seem to agree that remaining stocks will rapidly find their way into consumptive channels during the next few months. A well known operator has recently pointed out that the English demand for Swiss-made cheese is figured at 65,000 tons yearly—that is, when fine and second cheese can be bought at 5d to 6d per pound, or at quotations which the retailers are now selling at throughout Great Britain, therefore is decidedly a bright one.

The Halifax Chronicle says—There was cast at the Londonderry Iron Works on Friday a water pipe which the company claim is the largest pipe of the kind ever manufactured in Canada. The pipe is forty-two inches in diameter, made of Nova Scotia iron, and weighs nearly three tons. It was ordered for a culvert on the P. E. I. Railway and will be placed in position in a few weeks. The culvert is situated on the new track being laid at Wiltshire. The largest water pipe heretofore cast was thirty-six inches in diameter, and the casting of this monster 42-inch pipe was watched with some anxiety, but the process was very successful. This class of water pipe is now being largely used in the construction of railway culverts.

Writers in United States magazines, who take Canada for a subject, appear to have their eyes constantly on their United States audience, not on the subject they profess to be discussing. Hence they say what they think will please that audience, without any prime regard to the facts. Hence we have such nonsense as the following, over the name of Charles Aubrey Eaton, in the January number of the National Review of Boston: "Others have talked of annexation to the north as a fitting national destiny. And it must be admitted that they had many and good reasons for the hope that was within them. No artificial barriers, political or commercial, can change that fact. An English visitor has recently complained that Canadians are more like Americans than like the English. But what would the gentleman have? Canada is an American country and if she is to contribute anything of value to the world she must take herself for better or for worse. An English Canadian would be as absurd as an American Englishman. Not only are the spirit and genius of this country one, but its problems are one, its view point and destiny one. The Supreme Ruler has seen fit to place us here side by side and here we must remain. The whole trend naturally would be towards annexation or at least closer relations between the two countries. Commerce finds its natural channels north and south. Canadian goods to the States for enlarged opportunity. Americans come here for investments and pleasure. If nature had been allowed to do her perfect work the matter would have been settled long ago." It is high time that this talk about the same continent were dismissed, as chicanery. The notion that Canadians have no individuality of their own because they live on the same continent as some other people, is the stock in trade of sensationalists and the sweepings of the earth to the south of us that lack national character.—Halifax Herald.

IN FASHION.

BRIDGET LANTY, DIED Dec. 12th, WAS BURIED Dec. 14th, 1897.

Under the chill December sky The wind sighs sweetly

And through the bare and frozen streets Dead leaves whirl dreeily.

The funeral bell is ringing In solemn tones and loud, And in the pro-Cathedral Is gathering a crowd.

Through the cottage door they bear her, She who was friend to all, And on the black lay her, And with it many memories.

To St. Dunstan's now they bring her, With reverent friendly hands, And there to do her honour, A mitred Bishop stands.

And the priestess that she so revered, And the children that she taught, And the people who esteemed her, She who held the world as naught.

All came to pray around her, And to praise the selfless life, She, and the least among them, Now a conqueror in the strife.

They gave her every honour, And there they laid her dust away, And laid it in God's care, To await the judgment day.

The old Church where she laboured Is now closed and set aside, I saw her last grand funeral, When Bridget Lanty died.

And so the order changed, And the old has passed away, And with it many memories, On that dark December day.
