THE THOUGHTS OF THEOBALD.

RAILWAY ACCIDENTS.

The recent accident at Arnold's Cove is rightly getting a good deal of publicity. Unfortunately all railway accidents do not reach the public ear in this way. One which happened three or four years ago near Placentia Junction, in which the engine and tender were thrown over an embankment, was forgotten quickly and I do not remember that any enquiry was made. I happened to be on that train and can witness to the extremely narrow margin which saved a very serious situation. I suppose "accidents" are bound to happen—at least every one seems to think so, but at the same time, the Government Engineer has a very responsible duty to perform in carefully going over the road, and without fear or favour, have the railroad put in such condition as the public safety demands. Such portions of the line which are so uncertain in the spring of the year and as a consequence make the service anything but punctual or satisfactory, should be attended to. It is not for the public to suffer if money and work can improve these conditions in the spring. But the public does suffer, and the very uncertain service has become a by-word in the Colony. The public is suffering now when the "daily express" three or four times a week has become an accommodation or freight-passenger train, which meanders its weary way across country and may be expected six, eight or twelve hours after it is due. Consequently the express trains are generally overcrowded. Just here it might be well to ask for a few more first class cars, or even to have the present ones renovated, as they show decidedly the worse for wear. I don't know if the cushions are thoroughly dusted and cleaned after the day's use, but most people hesitate to sit on them without another covering.

Another "growl" is due the Bay Service, which is suffering since the Reid steamers have been sold. These steamers have been replaced by very inferior boats and it means much discomfort to those who have to travel to find that the accommodation on board is very bad indeed. For instance, the "Wren" on Trinity Bay is a wretched substitute for the "Ethie," and some passengers refuse to take passage by her. There seems to be a disregard for the public service that would not be tolerated in other countries. We are all prepared to sacrifice for the Empire, but when steamers are sold at enormous prices, we have a right to obtain suitable passenger boats to take their places. This is not antagonism to the Reid Nfld. Co., but a protest that they live up to their obligations as contractors in the public service.

THE TEACHERS' LOT AGAIN.

I met an old school-fellow the other day and among a few general questions I asked him if he was married. And in return he asked me how could a teacher afford to marry. And it is indeed difficult to see how a teacher with his present salary can afford to ask another fellow-being to share with him the anxieties as well as the joys of living. This man told me of one place in Newfoundland which gave the teacher $400.00 and fees, 20 years ago. Then the fees were not allowed, and now the salary has been cut to $350.00. This is not because the scholars have grown fewer, but because there are more scholars and a new school nearby is necessary. So that while our educational grants are increasing because of more children and more schools, the teachers themselves are paying a portion of the increase. How unfair it seems. One of the reasons why the teacher's complaint falls flat is because there are always a number of young men who are willing to take schools, who only intend to make use of the school to aid them in stepping from the school to the Church. They are young men, and glad of a few dollars to help them through college, so that in most cases, the teaching profession in itself does not hold the first place in their thoughts. All this serves to make the lot of the genuine teacher an unhappy and unappreciative one, and by this, our action, we degrade our teachers. Instead of raising them to the dignity and position which belongs by right to those in whose charge we place the future men and women of our land. Pay our teachers well and see that they are fitted for their great office.

him what a privilege he is getting and urge him to make use of his opportunities. I suppose the cities really afford many more temptations to go wrong than the outport. All cities are alike in this, and someone has said that all the wickedness of ancient Babylon is not to be compared with what goes on in New York or any large city to-day. The means of degradation are infinitely nearer our hands to-day than in former days, and it is very questionable whether "goodness" has kept pace with "badness." Some think the world is better, but taking all things into consideration in these days of war and death, it is hard to realize that it is so.

Enjoyable Dance

A very enjoyable dance was held in the basement of the Star of the Sea Hall, Thursday night and was well attended. During the night refreshments were served, and songs were pleasingly rendered by Private D. Cooper and Mr. C. Phippard, the other participants assisting in the chorus. The former assisted as floor manager and performed his duties in an able manner. The whole affair being under the auspices of Mesdames J. T. Kelly, Green and Payne who deserve credit, and those kind ladies desire to thank all who assisted with donations or who in any way helped to bring this enjoyable event to a success. On the afternoon of the same day a bazaar was held by Misses Kitty and Mildred Payne, Genevieve and Zita James and this also proved successful. These little girls of tender years were unfailing in their efforts to assist in a worthy cause, and their example should prove a lesson to many others. The sum which was beyond expectations from both sources will be devoted towards the Presentation Convent School. The ladies and their assistants deserve congratulations for promoting such an ideal pleasure, as without doubt they are zealous workers and were amply rewarded for same.—Com.

They Want Peace, But Can't Have It

London, August 21.—According to the Daily News, Arthur Von Gwinner, the well known German financial magistrate, and director of the Deutschen Bank, asked by his nephew whether subscriptions to the war loan would prolong the war, answered that in the case of Russia the answer would be "yes," because Russia could now have the peace, "which she does not deserve."

"England and France," he is quoted as saying, "could have peace now if they wanted it, though it will be very difficult for them to give in because of the consequences.

"But as for Germany, we cannot have peace, though we wish for it. Picture to yourself that we had to put an end to the war because the German people were weary of it and no more war loans could be raised. That would not put an end to this criminal war."

The demand of the allies, the writer argues, for indemnities makes yielding impossible. "It would mean absolute ruin for rich and poor alike."

Everyday Etiquette.

"When my girl chum brought her brother over to meet me for the first time, should I have risen?" asked Ruth.

"A hostess should always rise, when introduced to a man or woman. It is not necessary for a lady to rise to greet a man when she is introduced in your own home it is a mark of hospitality and breeding to greet your guests with a welcome handshake and a cordial remark," replied her oldest sister.

BILLY SUNDAY.

The Rev. Billy Sunday is a preacher with a punch. The Sunday punch is not intoxicating, being composed mostly of adjectives rimmed out with a cross-cut saw, but it is very disconcerting to people who stand for law and order and strict observance of the Sunday morning ritual.

Mr. Sunday was for years a professional ball player, and was never caught alive between the bases, being equipped with one of the most agile pair of feet ever planted on the human frame. He left baseball to enter the evangelistic field, upon which people who found fault with his batting average said he was a crook, and having been saying it ever since, with a rising inflection. Objection is made to Sunday on the score that he takes more money out of town than a three-ring circus, but nobody ever saw him out behind the tabernacle hiding the little pea under a walnut shell.

Billy Sunday is one of the few preachers who can draw a crowd at the evening service without serving ice cream and cake, furnishing motion pictures or advertising a wholesaled attack upon Christian Science. It is harder for a stout man to get into one of Sunday's meetings than it will be for a professing church member with a peroxide sniffly to get into the kingdom of heaven. Another queer thing is that people will go and listen to Sunday for two hours and a half, without discharging a single yawn, but if the local clergyman runs over thirty-five minutes everybody in the church will cast reproachful eyes at the wall clock.

Mr. Sunday believes in the use of gestures in expounding the Gospel and much of his expounding on a deal table sounds like opening the muffler cut-out in a closed garage. His legs and arms are moveable and can be made to revolve rapidly in any direction, and his language is of a plain, durable type which can be understood without running to the dictionary. Some people object to Mr. Sunday's language on account of bristles, and would rather have use long, compound words which not rasp the feelings and arouse memories of some watered-down scrape. But as Mr. Sunday invests this language for his own personal use, he will probably continue to it until his voice refuses to get on its chair at the sound of the bell. You may not like Billy Sunday, you have to give it to him.
