The Reformer's 1921 Budget.

sent administration there is much to create wonder. The Minister of Marine and Fisheries undertakes jobs his fitness for which is open to question, but the Prime Minister, that possessor of all the talents, can give the Honorable Mr. Coaker cards and spades and beat him ultimately at his own game. Not content with being Premier and Colnoial Secretary, the as he styles himself—senior member for St. John's West, also takes over the duties of the Minister of Finance and Customs, and as such, presents a budget to the House of which any fourth form schoolboy might well be ashamed. There is an old saying "that figures do not lie"; that may well be, but figures are often distorted to suit exigencies. Two and two may make four at times, but in a certain combination the same numerals make twentytwo. That is just what has happened in the Budget of the Liberal-Reform Leader, Richard Anderson Squires. One only needs to read that precious document to comprehend this.

In presenting this wonderful budget the political aspect was not omitted. Mr. Squires could not refrain from indulging in a assertions, and did not perpetudig at the expense of those who oppose him and his political principles. That alone is proof of the character of the man, stuck more closely to the text of who is a politician of the meanest type, and who never lets an sented the Prime Minister as opportunity of having a whack lying deliberately to the House at his opponents go by. Some of Assembly on this matter. few days ago the indignation of But then the Star often shoots the honorable gentleman was at random. keyed to the highest pitch because of a press despatch sent abroad by one whom he stigmatised as a common enemy of his country, but the language used in the compilation of the budget of $25, offered by the Manufacturers' is amply corroborative of every word written in that cable to the New York Tribune, the author of which in the extensive given in full in another column of this vocabulary at the command of issue. the Prime Minister, was styled a wrecker and worse. "Depression" is a word which appears very frequently in the budget speech of the Prime Minister. Whether he alone is entitled to utter that word is a moot point.

Anyway he does not make any apologies for its recurrence, and selling for Twenty-eight Dollars. utter that word is a moot point. as his budget will be sent broadcast, he must accept whatever share of the responsibility accrues from his own expressions.

In the manifesto of 1919, this same R. A. Squires promised a reduction in taxation. His only desire was to see to it that the high cost of living was made proportionate to the wages earned by the people. His first act was to increase the stipends of this party followers, and the budget of last year was notable only for a decrease in the duty of that well known article of food for the fishermen "Bologna Sausage." The 1920 budget was satirically known as the "Bologna Budget." The 1921 budget will go down to posterity as the "Surtax Budget." No as the "Surtax Budget." budget of last year was notable

The work as well as other minor al-terations, was done at Cork, by the Queenstown Dry Docks and Engineer-ing works, and occupied nearly 3 months. During that time the crew months. During that time the crew had quite an experience as with the present unsettled state of affairs in Ireland it was dangerous to move about the streets even in daylight, whilst it was madness to be about at night, and practically all the ships' crew were held up and searched at one period or another. The whole populace of Cork were in a state of terror, whilst everywhere armoured cars, and all the appliances of warfare were in evidence. Raids were continually being carried out, both by the rebels and military, whilst destruction in the shape of burning buildings was a common sight, in fact the principal buildings in Cork have all been destroyed.

Even the Digby came in for a share of what seemed to be a general scheme of silbse and destroyed.

The secon what seemed to be a general scheme of pillage and destruction. Late one night a party of masked men, armed to the teeth, boarded the ship, and after locking the, officers in their rooms, dismantled the wireless apparatus and took it away with them. The men threatened to shoot all and sundry who pilled interfaces with them in their own land are compelled.

threatened to shoot all and sundry who might interfere, with them in their work, one of the principal officers of the ship being field in his room with a loaded revolver whilst the raiders removed the wireless. Next morning the Superintendent of the works, which are owned by the Furness Withy Co., and employed about 600 men, addressed the employees, informing them that in case the stolen goods dressed the employees, informing them, that in case the stolen goods were not returned, the Company would have the plant closed, and their ships sent elsewhere. This evidently had the desired effect as several days later the damaged. One of the ships' officers had a narrow escape, whilst on a holiday to his home town. The train on which ne was travelling was ambushed by a y began a fusillade of indiscriminate shooting. On hearing the firing he op-

At Cork the Digby, signed on a new crew, except the officers and when the necessary al terations had been completed, the liner, started for the port of Liverpool to resume her regular service. Her trou-bles however were not at an end. Shortly after leaving Queenstown it was discovered that the Sinn Fein flag was flying above the Union Jack. This state of affairs of course on board of an English ship was out of the ques-tion, and on being detected by the ship's officers it was immediately hauled down and the Old Jack given its proper and rightful position. Further down the river, with the Queenstown pilot on board, the prompt action of Capt. Chambers, saved a serious collision, with three Naval vessels which were moored near each other. As it was the Digby lost an anchor but al were pleased, that the affair turned out as well as it did, and were even
