Fishermen's Union, and have tried to make it clear that there is no connection between the one and the other. The question which is puzzling the minds of the public at present is, who will form the Opposition? It is understood that representations have been made to the Right Hon. Sir Robert Bond to re-enter public life again but that under existing circumstances he is unable to comply with the request.

To-day the public find themselves as sheep without a shepherd, and unable to decide to whom to turn to lead them into the paths of safety. Although gratifying to know that the gratifying to know the gratifying to know the gratifying the gratification of their position is perilous, it is on their free and independent spirit, and anyone who dares to attempt to drive them would be well advised to count the cost of his rashness.
