The Rival Clansmen

A Scottish Vendetta.

A Scotlish Vendetta.

"Thanks, brave sir," exclaimed the Chieftain, grasping his hand; "you have sarned my everlasting gratitude. But pray who is the young lady with you?" "She's my sister," was the reply, "But, like yersel", she has cause to remember the McKenzies, and especially this Ian. Ian McKenzie has ruined and betrayed her, has caused a brokan-hearted faither and mither to gang in sorrew tae, their grayes, has blighted this girl's brightest houps, has caused her brither mony anxious thochts an 'mackle sorrow, an' I only wait tae meet him again tae lat him feel the brunt o' an honest man's indignation."

lat him feel the brunt o' an honest man sindignation."

"The vullain !" ejaculated M'Leod. "I am almost glad that such a man has declared humself my enemy."

"And let me tell you, too," said Flora, "that it is in a great measure because of him that I am obliged to fly to you tor protection. He desires to make me his wife, and Donald Cameron espouses his suit, despite the fact that I am M'Kenzie is already the husband of Jeannie Gordon."

wile, and Donald Cameron esponses his suit, despite the fact that Ian M'Kenzie is already the husband of Jeannie Gordon. It is already the husband of Jeannie Gordon. It is a second to the Caterans?"

"I think his connection with Cameron places it beyond a doubt," replied Flora.

"They are pair of detestable villains," muttered the old man. "But in all this I see increased danger to my son. "If Ian M'Kenzie has sworn to have Hector's life, and has a hold upon him, and so much at stake between them, I cannot think that he means to give him up. I think I see a glimmer of their infernal conspiracy; but I may be able to break up their scheme in a way they wot sot of, thanks to the Witch of Ben-Larr." I will gladly be of assistance," said the old woman. "And within the hour I have discovered a new reason why I should. That, toe, I will keep te myself for the present. But I may say that I have long wandered about waiting for a day of reckoning with Donald Cameron for a deed which has surely often caused his guilty heart to quake. I am now tired of waiting, and pant eagerly for the consummation of my desire. Those who have been wronged shall then be righted. Ah, M'Leod, you look strangely at me speaking thus. I have been known for years as a half-crared, half unearthly being, whom it were almost a pity to let live. The time will shortly come when I shall show that I am a weman as other women, with feelings like other women for we ought not to delay after nightfall in starting."

"Well spoken. My clansmen will not be difficult to summon te night." And as the Chief spoke he lifted the handbell and rang it loudly.

"Send Roderick M'Leod here," he exclaimed to the gnillie who appeared in answer to his summons.

In a few minutes a tall, swarthy Highlander entered the room and saluted the Chief.

"Roderick," said old M'Leod, addressing him, "we must lay aside the fork, the knife, and the eup for the claymore, the dirk, and the target. Our honor is is danger."

the knile, and the cup for the claymore, the dirk, and the target. Our honor is in danger."

"The clansmen will defend their honor," was the reply.

"I know it well. Are our kinsmen in the Castle?"

"They are."

"They are."

"Then give them this message. Tell them that Ian M'Kenzie, allied with the Caterans of Ben-a-Chrui, holds the so of your Chieftain a prisoner. They offer to set him free upon condition that your Chieftain agrees to a proposal which he san sonsequence rejected. His desire is that the Caterans of Ben-a-Chrui and the M'Kenzies be placed in a position in which he shall be able to propose terms to them, and he also desires that Hector M'Leod may be rescued from the hands of those who hold him. Let them take boats te cross Loch Marce."

"I will deliver your message, my Chieftain. The answer shall be every man appearing armed before you."

"I doubt it not," replied M'Leod; and the man, who was a sort of Lieutenant to the Chief, retired.

"And now, my sister, I will go and prepare myself for the raid, for the clanswill be eager to be off."

"Gif ye've an auld swird lyin' aboot, I'll tak' it in my hand and stap alang wiye," said Gordon, rising and addressing the Chief.

Jeannie looked up at her brother wistfully; and said.

Jeannie looked up at her brother wistfully, and said—"But, Ned, you may get yourself iniffed, and be unable to return."

"Hae nae fear o', that, lassie. I'm gann in a richtur cause, an' in guid company an' wi, a guid swird in my hand I'll rin less risk o' gettin' a clout than ye mey think. I may meet Ian M'Kenzie there."

The poor girl shuddered as she heard he latter words. Bad as Ian had proved libself to be, and bitterly as she now skt towards him, she drew back at the des of her brother and the man she had aith in so long meeting in combat.
