Ann? The fact that Mrs. Gold was insolvent only came to light a few days ago when her solicitor, J. B. Dow, B.A., LL.B., advised her to call a meeting of her creditors. Mrs. Gold had long been regarded as the wealthiest woman in Whitby. She lives in a fine old mansion near the center of the town, but her tastes were not expensive, and she was never known to lavish any more money on her personal adornment than was absolutely necessary. She counts among her family connections some of the best people socially in the county, among them being the Mackies, the de Harts the Richardsons and the Almonds, and her name stood so high that she had no difficulty in negotiating large loans at her own terms. Security was not given, nor was it asked, except in a Tew cases. Her personal fortune was believed to be intact, and until the meeting of creditors on Morday very few had any idea that she was heavily involved. This was due to the secrec; with which she conducted her business affairs. Invariably when she asked accommodation it was on the plea that she was about to loan a considerable sum of money on gilt edged security and good interest, and was just lacking the sum of money she was asking She would represent, it is said. I that interest on loans was overdue and her loans were generally for periods of less than a year. In many cases she would enjoin the lender to secrecy as she did not want anyone to know the injunction observed that when the creditors were called together was manifested. greatest surprise were schoolteachers, dress makers, corner grocerymen, domestics and men of capital. In a number of cases the loans represented years of saving. One creditor had been years accumulating $100, which she readily handed over to Mrs. Gold. Two sisters were in for $500 each, and neither knew that both were creditors. Everywhere there is intense indignation and parties who have suffered by the revelations concerning Mrs. Gold's affairs are loud in their denunciation of the methods employed by the woman in luring victims. Very few citizens take any stock in the story that the fortune was dissi-pated through contributions to charity, though it is known that Mrs. Gold to the poor, and to all schemes of the church. Her givings to the church were confined to the Methodist Taber nacle, it is said. Only a month ago the church was entirely overhauled, seats unholstered, new carpets laid and the whole interior redecorated. But her benefactions could hardly have accounted for the loss of so large a fortune, and the people who seek for the real cause of the insolvency are looking elsewhere. There is a tendency to account for the financial difficulties in which the woman finds herself by looking to the stock market a mania for speculation during the last few months, and it is learned from an authoritative source that two weeks ago she appealed to Mrs. John Rice for the loan of $2,000 to speculate in squad. According to the police the negro said: "I went there to get him and I got him." The shooting occurred at Mr. Green's home. Williams was a furnace tender at the house where Mr. Green lived, and was standing in the doorway with his hand behind him when Mr. Green came up and addressed him. He immediately fired five times, four of the shots striking Mr. Green in the face. liams was arrested at once. After being taken to the station, where he questioned, Williams declared that he was in love with and wanted to marry Pessie Davis, a colored girl who was employed in the Green household, but Mr. Green persecuted him and would not let him marry her He declared that Mr. Green had offered the girl $30,000 to bring a suit for slander against him. He talked irrationally and the police believe him to be insane.

When asked if he were sorry fo doing the shooting, Williams replied:
"No, not a bit. I'd rather be dead than alive with the sinnder heaped upon me by that man.' He told the police sergeants that he had intended to bring suit agains Green for slander, and had already consulted several lawyers. ## Tillson Oats Goodness Starts in the Fields

Good oats do not grow by accident. They are the result of good seed, rich soil, careful cultivation.

We buy Canadian oats where we know these conditions exist—the best oat-producing country in the world. By reason of our half-century of buying from the growers of this district, they give us the first choice of their crops.

It is this care in buying the oats that gives Tillson's pan-dried Oats their high value as a food. It stands to reason that oats weighing 40 lbs. to the bushel will be richer in albuminoids and fats than the small husky oats, a bushel of which weighs but 31 lbs.

There is no waste matter in Tillson's pan-dried Oats-it is just the pure berries of large meaty oats.
