DEAWING FOR THE PIANO.

As the time for drawing the piano ap-proaches, the attention of the public gen-erally is turned toward Mr. James Laut's erally is turned toward Mr. James Lauts teastore at 281 York street. The draw-ing will take place at nice o'clock to-morrow might, when Mr. Lauts elegant new store will no doubt be crowded by his many pat-rons each of whom is of course confident he er she will get the coveted instrument. Those who have not procured tickets for the drawing should do so while there is yet time. A ticket is given away with each $5 worth of 60 cent tea. The tea is well worth the money to say nothing of the chance you have of drawing the piano. Call at Mr. Laut's to-day or to-morrow and lay in a supply for the Christmas holidays.

Once more the Year on wings of joy and grief Has circled to the happy Christmas-tide; The seasons pass, but one thing doth abide, And love and faith defy the falling leaf. Not even Time, the sleepless, envious thief Of human joy, can snatch the hope we hide. What though the sea we sail be deep and wide And sore beset by many a sunken reef?
