FRUIT GARDEN.

The early crops being off, the plants must be treated with reference to next year's bearing.

Insects are still to be fought; the fail welworm is not particular as to its choice, and spreads its not here and there. The large beetles and caterpillars upon the grape are to be hand-picked. Growers of Plants advise spring planting, and with good reason, their propagating beds keep pushing out runners, which take root and form new plants until cold weather checks them. If planting is done in the fall, it should be done early-not later than September; and to furnish plants at this time the nurseryman is obliged to waste many runners, which if left alone for a few weeks would make good plants for his spring sales. In Fall Planting, the ground is in such excellent condition, and other work is not so pressing as in spring, that those who raise their own plants will find it advantageous to set at this season. If the plants are at hand they can be set early in September, after very hot weather is over; at this time the outer leaves of the plants should be removed, leaving only the central bud; if the season is favorable for a late growth, the chances are that a fair erop may be gathered next spring. Strumberries .- Growers differ as to the advisability of fall or spring planting. A new strawberry plant needs a full season's growth to become strong enough to bear a full crop. If the early runners remain where they take root, they will bear a crop next spring. If they are rooted in pots, and transferred to another bed, without any disturbance of the roots, they will bear well next year. This method, while very useful in private gardens, is not to be thought of by those who plant acres. If ordinary plants be set next spring, they will grow all the season, and give a crop the year following. If set this fall, they will make some growth, give a few berries next spring, but not a full crop until the next Blackberries and Raspberries .- The new growth to bear next year having been selected, all other shoots are to be destroyed. Pinching the growing end, when the canes are tall enough, as advised last month, will cause side shoots to grow, and these, when 12 or 18 inches long, according to the kind, are to have their growth stopped by pinching. Proper attention at this season will result in well-branched stocky plants, with abundant fruit next year. Black-caps and those red varieties that do not form suckers, are to have their new shoots required for next year's fruiting, similarly pinched, and all others, that will make the bush too dense, are to be removed. Grope Vines need watching for the first appearance of mildew. Some varieties, especially those hybrids containing a cross of the European vine, are usually more susceptible to mildewthan the natives. When the leaves of any vine in the collection show grayish white spots on the under side, or the stems to the clusters show a mouldy appearance, apply sulphur to the whole, as it acts as a preventive as well as a cure. The dealers furnish bellows for the purpose, which allow the under side of the leaves to be reached. Apply on a still day, and diffuse a slight but uniform dusting over the whole vine. If laterals continue to push, pinch back as heretofore
