

| | |
|--|------|
| | PAGE |
| ter of the slaveholder, a trampler on humanity—Society in the Cotton States—Representatives of the Slave States in Congress—Their political strength and assumption of social superiority—Rising of slaves at Southampton, Virginia—Terrible outpouring of white vengeance—The Negro at the North a pariah—Caste and the bar of colour..... | 44 |
| SECTION VI.—Garrison's abolition platform in the Liberator —Severity of his denunciations of slavery—Compensation to the slaveowner scouted by the Liberator —Wrongfulness of emancipation without it—Abolition of slavery in the West Indies—The realm of slavery disturbed by the Liberator —The journal boycotted and its editor threatened—Nat Turner's rising—Chief Justice Taney's judgment—Race exclusiveness at the North—Garrison at war with caste feeling—Insoluble problem of the races—Prudence Crandall opens a school for coloured children—She is persecuted, and the school broken up—Organization of the New England Anti-Slavery Society—Preamble of its constitution and objects aimed at | 54 |
| SECTION VI. A.—Garrison's antagonism to the Colonization Society—Why he assailed its doctrines and purposes—Visits England as the representative of American abolitionism—Heartiness of his welcome—Buxton's mistake—Great meeting at Exeter Hall—O'Connell's invective against slavery—Garrison returns to America—Accused of having traduced his country in England—Incendiary violence of the pro-slavery Press—The Liberator's reply to his calumniators—Garrison's marriage—The American Anti-Slavery Society founded at Philadelphia—Garrison drafts the Declaration of Sentiments—Object of the Convention and the movement which it embodied, "to bring the whole nation to speedy repentance" | 69 |
| SECTION VII.—A British anti-slavery lecture visits America—Violent outcry against the "foreign emissary"—A public meeting at Boston denounces Thompson—Garrison criticizes the speeches and speakers at the meeting—Inflamed state of the public mind—Garrison falls into the hands of the mob—Rescued by the Mayor of Boston, he spends the night in prison—Thompson escapes and returns to England—The abolitionists suffer martyrdom for the cause..... | 86 |