

ed of a splendid town,
had anticipated, they
When they visited at rid of them by tell-would be gratified.
and his companions
at six months' time, at which they carried with every pace, not only
on their baggage up-
now arrived upon the ruined some miserable
which none but men
they coasted toward months of the Mis-
and all but 16 of their only lived to reach
spent in wanderings
hardships and mis-

man's expedition, the ed his wife, whom he
any, consisting of 80
to search after him,
at have prolonged his ht be found. Of this is narrative.

an opportunity to have
should meet. Oppor-
as Indians were dis-
them in their boats,
to. These wily peco-
men, which to this day
no means of captivi-

shore, and setting a
in the top a letter, and to the Spaniards to
at John Orlin and was lightly judging it to be assuming it was from
of himself, would not bring it, although all
a strenuously argued
two Indian Indians
near this place, and

