ARTILLERY AT THE EX.

Officers of Second Contingent Apply for Increase in Men's Rations.

The two Connor brothers who were being held as suspects for the murder of William Stone, the G. T. B. agent at Whitby, were released on Saturday on the exclusive evidence of the crew of the freight from which they were captured that they had been seen at Oshawa at the time Stone must have been shot.

C. A. Macdonald, the man who collected the cartridges outside the ticket office in Whitby twenty minutes after the shooting occurred, declares that the ticket office light was out, and it would have been impossible for him to have seen young Stone lying on the floor, which statement was proved at a test held on Friday night.

Lestie Cormack, the Bell telephone night operator, declares that Stone made three telephone calls after being shot. The first time he asked Cormack for Chief MacGroarty, saying: "Get the chief, quick; I've been shot."

DRESDEN FOUNDERED?

Belief Grows That Entire German Squadron Has Been Sunk.

Special Direct Copyrighted Cable to The Toronto World. BUENOS AYRES, Dec. 13.—Three hundred beds for sailors wounded in the Falkland Islands naval battle have been requested in wireless messages received today at Montevideo from the British fleet.

According to the messages, the wounded will be sent to Montevideo on the British ships, which are expected to arrive at Montevideo. The rest of the vessels, according to wireless messages, will move northward several hundred miles off the South American coast.

It is believed that the desire of the British to force German sympathizers to take care of the wounded is responsible for the landing of the men at the Falkland Islands, British colony.

LODZ EVACUATED GERMANS ADMIT

Official Statement Says Russian Withdrawal Not Observed by Teutons at First

Special Direct Copyrighted Cable to The Toronto World. BERLIN, Dec. 13.—(Via wireless to London.)—The Russian losses to date in the fighting in Poland are estimated at 150,000 men, including 60,000 prisoners, in a report received from the army headquarters and made public here tonight.

The evacuation of Lodz is partially substantiated by headquarters' report, as it states that the evacuation of the city was at first not observed, but was merely the outcome of the previous three days' fighting.

The Russian trenches were found literally filled with dead. This was due to the fact that the Russian forces were unable to retreat, and were cut off from their lines.

The Russian army headquarters confirms the statements that the Russians evacuated Lodz. It was at first not observed, but was merely the outcome of the previous three days' fighting.

SARDINE OIL TO WORK BIG GUNS

French Soldier Saved the Day by Using His Lunch

PARIS, Dec. 12.—Sardines are playing a not inconsiderable part in this campaign. The oil from one box and the sardines from another were responsible for the capture of one of the big French guns and the capture of at least one German prisoner.

Just as the officer was about to send a man back to obtain some sardines, a French soldier jumped and ran to the trench, waving a tin of sardines above his head.

The officer relates a story told by only 60 yards away from the trench. When there was a full tin of sardines in the trench, the French soldier jumped and ran to the trench, waving a tin of sardines above his head.
