

denial that she spoke aloud, but no one noticed in the busy street. "Never! never!" she repeated, and her hands in their worn cotton gloves pressed the fingers cruelly into the palms. The voice, silenced for the time, sank back again beneath the surface of her mind. She walked on, out of breath with the battle, but with a certain warm confidence in her heart.