Cookshutt Plow Company, Brantford, Announces a Ten Per Cent Increase in Wages—Thomas Organ Company May Remove From Woodstock.

Brantford is going to have a building boom this summer. The town council met and transacted business last night.

Mr. George Aird, a well-known resident of Brantford, is dead.

Brantford board of health will demand that every citizen be vaccinated.

John Gallagher, of Galt, was fined $5 and costs for using profane language to the chief of police there the other day.

Mrs. Colin Sutherland, of Embro, mother of ex-Warden Sutherland, of Oxford county, continues to be seriously indisposed.

The Elgin county council finance committee opened tenders for $40,000 court house debentures. The offer of J. A. Stimson & Co., of Toronto, of $40,000 was accepted.

The number of tavern licenses issued in Waterloo county in 1874 was 135; in 1897 they numbered 88. The wholesale liquor licenses for the year mentioned were, respectively, 21 and 10.

The Thomas Organ Company has not a very high opinion of the policy pursued by the Woodstock town council in its treatment of manufacturers, and there is a possibility of the firm removing from Woodstock.

John G. Ballard has sold his farm on the 1st con. of Elma, adjoining the Listowel corporation, to Henry Karges, at the price of $60 per acre. The farm contains about 100 acres, and is in capital shape, with excellent buildings.

Listowel Standard: The Perth battalion of volunteers is now two companies short, and we understand that an effort is being made to fill the vacancies by organizing a company each at Tavistock and Listowel.

The Cockshutt Plow Company, of Brantford have announced an increase in wages to the whole of their employees of about 10 per cent. This will mean several hundred dollars more which will be paid out to the men each fortnight.

Ingersoll Chronicle: A few days ago while Ed. Young, tinsmith for John Weston, was soldering in the bathroom tank of Mr. George Brasher's residence he was overcome by the fumes of the muriatic acid, which he was using, and sank unconscious to the bottom of the tank. The cessation of the taps of his hammer caused Mrs. Brasher to send upstairs to see if he had gone, when he was discovered. Some men were summoned to take him out, and the doctors arrived with restoratives not a moment too soon to save his life.

On Wednesday morning Mrs. Charles Bean, of the fourth concession of McGillivray, was in Clandeby shopping, and apparently in the best of health, but before daylight had gone she was dead. The deceased was the wife of Charles Bean, a well-known farmer, and was 59 years of age. Her sudden demise came as a terrible shock to her relatives and friends. In the evening she went to the barn to milk the cows, when she was suddenly taken ill, and before a doctor could be summoned she was dead. Death was caused from heart disease. Deceased leaves a husband and four children, two sons and two daughters.

Mr. Neal D. McCallum has purchased 50 acres, part of the old homestead, on the fourth concession, North Dorchester, from his brother, Angus D. McCallum, for $2,500.50.

THIN-SKINNED CITY COUNCIL

Making a Mountain Out of a Mole-Hill.

Quite a Collection of "Offended Dignity."

Mayor Wilson's Reference to the Trust Incident.

Enough Publicity to Make the "Head Nurse's" Remark Historic.

The Amended Hospital Bill—Council Wants Power to Issue Debentures for $25,000 if It Does Not Go Through—Committee Reports—A Lengthy Session.

The mayor told the city council his troubles last night. He had not forgotten the reply the head nurse at the city hospital made him when he asked her about a certain time he saw her going to Lawyer Purdon's office, and he told the council about it. The council proved excellent consolers. With a few exceptions, the city fathers were united in their protests against the rebuff to their chief magistrate, and a resolution was passed expressing their indignation over the matter. [The young lady had told the mayor that what he asked about "was none of his business."]

There were several other matters, more or less important, handled at last night's session also. Among them was the passing of a motion to apply to the legislature for permission to issue debentures amounting to $10,000 if the agreement with the county is ratified, and $25,000 if it is not, for the completion of the Victoria Hospital. Some of the contracts for the board of works' supplies were not ratified by the council, as the committee had recommended. All the members but Ald. Wilkey were present. The meeting adjourned at 12:30. It was a choice between Ald. Jolly's motion to postpone improvements and adjournment. It was decided to hold a special meeting next Monday night to consider the permanent improvement question.

THE MAYOR'S COMPLAINT.

When all the written communications had been disposed of, the mayor said: "I, as your representative on the hospital trust, have a communication to make. When I was at Toronto on the hospital deputation, I was told by Mr. Thomas H. Purdon that it was very doubtful if I was a member of the hospital trust, and I judge from subsequent actions that he and others are of the opinion I am not. At the meeting of the trust last Friday, I asked a simple question: 'I was told by Mr. I wanted to fix a date, and I asked if it was the day that she went to Mr. Purdon's office and she told me that it was none of my business. I want to know before going back to the trust whether I am or not a member.' Ald. McPhillips was the first to take up the cudgels in the mayor's behalf. 'That is a matter that does not require discussion. Anyone knows,' he said, and his voice fairly bulged with conviction, 'that you are a member de facto.'

But Ald. McPhillips would have acted too summarily for Ald. Jolly's part of the programme. Ald. Jolly had a motion—a long one—ready for the occasion. The mayor's communication had not come as a surprise to at least one member of the board. The way Ald. Jolly was prepared to act upon it was as follows:

"That having learned of the gross insult offered his Worship Mayor Wilson, chief magistrate of the city of London, by an employee under control of the board of hospital trustees, at a recent meeting held by said board of trustees, we the members of the city council, feel indignant that the members of the hospital trust should allow the said employee under their control to speak to his worship, one of the members of the said trust, in such an unbecoming manner, without reprimand from said hospital trust; and that we consider his Worship Mayor Wilson is the legal representative from the council on the board of hospital trustees, and we urgently request his worship to continue to represent the city council on the board of hospital trustees, and that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the chairman of the hospital trust."

Ald. McPhillips again showed his willingness to uphold the mayor's dignity. "I will support that motion," he said. "If Ald. Jolly will add the request that that particular nurse apologize to his worship."

Ald. Plant objected. He wanted to know more about the affair. It was something which they could not decide so hastily. People sometimes asked questions not bearing on the facts under consideration, and an answer could be expected accordingly. From what he had learned of the matter, Ald. Plant believed that it was not in the best interest of the community to take any such notice of the incident.

Ald. Jolly—Suppose Ald. Plant were at the head of a large company, and asked a question of one of his employees, and were told it was none of his business, would he think it right that any employee should give such an answer? The mayor has been grossly insulted, and I think the council should make a motion of indignation.

Ald. Garratt was extremely wrathful. Not only did he feel it was an indignity to the mayor, but also to himself. "When I read the account in the papers, I felt it like a knife," he said. The mayor should have had her dismissed on the spot. Who were paying the hospital trust? The citizens were. The council represented the citizens, and the mayor was the chief magistrate of the council. An insult to him was an insult to all citizens. Thus Ald. Garratt justified that "knifelike" feeling.

Ald. McPhillips has a way of looking on the bright side of things. "It was a good job," he said, in his accustomed tone, so pleasantly convincing, "that that employee was a lady and not a man, or he would have gone out of the front door or the back."

Ald. Pritchard tried to express his indignation, caused by the insult to the mayor and the citizens generally. But with the effort his indignation seemed to increase, and at last he had to admit that he "couldn't" use language strong enough for his purpose.

Undaunted by Ald. Pritchard's failure, Ald. Douglass rose to give vent to his feelings of indignation. The mayor had been insulted, he said, and not only he, but every ratepayer. The council should ask for the nurse's dismissal.

Ald. Greenlees—it seems to me that we are making a mountain out of a molehill. I don't know the exact question asked by the mayor, nor his demeanor. I don't know the exact reply made by the nurse, nor her demeanor. I am not ready to condemn the lady in the wholesale and hearty manner mentioned in the resolution. It all depends upon the circumstances of the case. If the mayor asked this young lady a question bordering on the impertinent, then it cannot be wondered at that she retorted in a like manner. I am quite willing to sustain the mayor, but I think it would have become the honor and dignity of the council to have let the matter go. So far as an expression of opinion upon the mayor being a member of the hospital trust, I am quite ready to say that I think he is.

The mayor recounted for Ald. Greenlees the circumstances which gave rise to the "insult," and added: "If you expect me to put up with that sort of thing, I cannot represent you on the trust."

Ald. Rumball called attention to the folly of putting a rider to the motion about apologizing. If the nurse refused to apologize, what sort of a fix would the council be in? he asked. "I wouldn't have a rider on," said the mayor, hastily.

Ald. Carrothers said that any young lady who would insult the chief magistrate of the city and not apologize for it, was not fit to be head nurse of the city hospital.

Ald. O'Meara told a good story. It was of Dean Swift, who said that Englishmen, when they went to Ireland, soon became more Irish than the Irish. There were some people, said Ald. O'Meara, who when they were made officials became more saucy than

But Ald. O'Meara stopped short in the application of his illustration.

Ald. Jolly's resolution was adopted, eleven aldermen voting for it. The yeas and nays were not called.

OTHER COMMUNICATIONS.

Mr. C. W. Davis and others asked for the reduction of license fees on billiard and pool tables. Referred to No. 3 committee.

The Tailors' Union asked that the union label be on the firemen's uniforms. No. 3.

John Cambridge, who was fined $50 for selling cider on Sunday, asked for the remission of the fine. No. 1 committee.

The East End Hall was granted free for a Masonic "At Home" to be held about March 30 by Corinthian Lodge.

ABOUT THE DRILL SHED.

A petition signed by 100 residents in the vicinity of the drill shed asked the council to communicate with the minister of militia and defense, and point out that the extension of the drill shed to the street line west, as proposed, would be a distinct injury to adjacent property. Dr. Roome and Mr. Thomas Coffey spoke in behalf of the petitioners. They felt that an injustice would be done them if the extensions were made. The residents were not, said Dr. Roome, asking that the drill shed be removed, although they believed it would have been in the interest of the city if it had been removed some time ago.

Ald. Winnett and Ald. O'Meara wanted to send the petition to the minister, but Ald. Greenlees wanted further information on the matter. Whether or not the extension would be unsightly, would depend upon the style of a building. There were also other facts to be considered, he said, and he favored referring the matter to No. 2 committee.

Ald. Graham said the commandant of the Seventh should be consulted before action was taken.

The matter was referred to No. 2 committee, and meanwhile the government will be asked to defer action until the council is heard from.

AT THE WRONG PLACE.

No. 3 committee wanted John Murphy's account for services as market constable filed, the appointment having been made by Ald. Carrothers during his membership on the board of health. Several of the aldermen voted to pay the account, but it was finally referred to the board of health.

The appointment of an extra fireman was laid over until the north end hall is considered.

NUMBER TWO COMMITTEE.

No. 2 committee recommended the cancellation of the contract with Moses Cox to construct a drain on Piccadilly street, between William and Adelaide streets, in order to remedy the complaint made in a communication from
