Canada's Victory Loan Will Keep the Workers Busy

THEN the war started many people predicted the ruin of Canada's industries.

But time has shown that the natural resources and basic industries of Canada are of immense importance in helping to keep Great Britain supplied with food, munitions and equipment.

Because of this, there has been a steady cash market for the farmers, as well as plenty of work at good wages for all the workers in other lines of industry.

But now the time has come when Great Britain can purchase her supplies on this side of the Atlantic only on credit. If Canada does not grant this credit, Britain will be obliged to place her orders where credit is available. If Canada does grant this credit our cash markets will be continued and the workers kept busy.

The Only Way to raise the money needed to establish this credit is by borrowing from all the people of Canada through the sale of Victory Bonds.

Every man and woman in Canada, therefore, is vitally interested in the success of Canada's Victory Loan, for upon its complete success depends the continuance of Canada's agricultural and business prosperity.
