TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES: Sir—In last night's Times there is a general notice of the Trafalgar Day for the benefit of the British Red Cross Society, but in all fair play, why should the sailors' day, their own day, be taken from them? Last winter our own Seamen's Mission was without a magazine for the sailors till a good word was said in the columns of this paper for them; then the magazine was sent. I understand that the Seamen's Mission has funds to carry on its work this winter (our winter part). Stop and think. How many hundreds of parcels and letters are taken into the post office by the senders? Have they a thought for the sailors till a good word was said in the columns of this paper for them? Read Ps. 107 in war time. Perhaps
