FOR BIG SEASON

Already Many Requests for Information re 1925 Auto Travel.

There is early promise of a larger Brunswick and other parts of the maritime provinces next year than ever. The season just closing was regarded as an excellent one but 1925 will likely far surpass it. Here is an indication. J. Charlton Berrie. secretary of the New Brunswick Automobile Association, said today that already he has received 78 requests for information as to routes of travel in this province. These come from prospective visitors of the next summer outing season, from the land below the dividing line. At this time last year such requests numbered only four. That is a wide difference and may be fairly taken as showing that 1925 will be ly taken as showing that 1925 will be bigger than ever from the tourist business standpoint.

The excellent roads of the province, the attractive scenery, the good climate, the fishing and other pleasures to be enjoyed are becoming more and more known, with a consequent quent advantage to the province.
Add that the Admiral Beatty hotel will be opened in St. John for the business of 1925 and there is further reason for the optimistic outlook.

Conservatives

The keynote of the Labor platform is expected to be its foreign policy. The accomplishments toward peace, and rehabilitation of Europe, will be cited, with particular stress laid on the resumption of friendly relations with France, and the Geneva disarmement protocol. disarmament protocol.

The benefits of the Anglo-Russian treaty, as regarding domestic business, will also be emphasized.

The Conservatives and Liberals will no doubt stress Labor's failure to solve the unemployment problem, which is somewhat greater today than when MacDonald assumed his nost

A fight against the more socialistic proposals of Labor, and a tendency to minimize the Government's record in European reconstruction is also painned.

Labor's reply on the unemployment issue is expected to be based on what they term lack of opportunity, because of a minority Government, asserting that the solution of employment problems is dependent upon fundamental changes in the whole economic system, and the development of the nation's latent resources.

London, Oct. 10—(Canadian Press)—
With Parliament dissolved at the request of Premier MacDonald, following the defeat of the Government in the House of Commons, the utterances of the politicians and the comments of the press indicate that the coming election on October 29 is likely to be one of the bitterest in recent years. Sydney Webb, president of the Board of Trade, is quoted as saying that the campaign is quoted as saying that the campaign will be "an especially dirty one," and the angry tone already manifest in many declarations seems to justify the

One sign of the eagerness of the Liberals and Conservatives to prevent another Laborite Government is the initiation of negotiations between the older parties with a view to minimizing the number of three-cornered contests. Failure to arrange any such Liberal and Conservative agreement in the last Conservative agreement in the last election led to the return of a large number of Laborites by minority

No Formal Compact.

The movement now afoot has not The movement now afoot has not taken the shape of a formal compact between the respective leaders, and there is no talk of a coalition, but strings are being pulled behind the scenes to insure that the way be left clear on a give-and-take basis for the success of anti-Government candidates of either party. This, if it is to suc-ceed, implies that the Conservatives must support the Liberals in some conmust support the Liberals in some constituencies, and vice versa.

It is evident that the women are to participate in the fight to an extent at least equal to that of the last election. The headquarters of all the parties have received a multitude of offers of electoral help from women, and all have several women candidates, with prospects of more. Aside from the eight women members of Parliament, all of whom are seeking re-election, more than a score of aspirants are announced, the Laborites having by far the greatest number.

"Company" Room The day when one room was reserved for "company" and nary another door left open has gone. We are advancing from the time when furniture mainly meant rugged use and little in looks. Comfort we still keep first in mind when furnishing one room after another—but we have learned to love an appearance it does the heart good to look upon. For instance, guests are now invited also into the Dining Room, where we have a suite to gladden the eye on top of being most practical. The Marcus windows now show some specially interesting Dining Room suggestions. You cannot find anything like the extent of their service in this regard. And if desirable, you have
