ONLY THE HUN.

Austria is out of the war. Germany, the bully of the nations, the arch-criminal, must now choose, and choose quickly, between abject surrender and the relentless invasion of her own territory. The Allies are free to gather their forces, sweep through Austria, and assault Germany on the Bavarian frontier, or up the Danube valley or through Bohemia. It may be assumed that whatever the German-Austrian and the Hungarians may do, and they certainly will not commit overt acts against the Allies, the Poles, Czechs-Slovaks and Jug-Slavs will do everything in their power to aid their deliverers and break down the last stronghold of autocracy.

The last days of the fighting on the Italian front made glorious history for Italy, and for the British and French and American soldiers who shared in the victorious advance. Not less thrilling was the news that came last night from the western front, where the Germans were in headlong retreat before the Belgians, British, French and Americans, suffering heavy losses in men and material. A terrible foreboding of what is in store for them if they go on fighting was given by the great squadrons of Allied airplanes, which with bomb and machine-gun decimated their ranks and destroyed their communications. The dullest German must now be able to realize what further fighting means, and the war-lords must realize that they stand in the shadow of doom.

It is really difficult to realize the stupendous change that has come in the last three months, and especially since Bulgaria threw up the sponge. Anxiety is now at an end, except for the lives of those who are still on the fighting line, and a possible fear that the victors may be too lenient with the murderers. If the latter choose to fight on, they will be able to destroy many noble lives, but the Allies must finish their task. Prussianism must be crushed, autocracy must be overthrown, and order must be brought out of chaos in Russia. The next move is up to Germany, and the world waits to hear whether she has learned her lesson or must be further beaten into submission.

LEST WE FORGET.

So many and so terrible have been the arrangements of Germany for so long a time, and so many and so terrible have been the crimes committed in this war, and so accustomed have people become to new horrors, that it is a little difficult to feel now as they feel when the conviction was first forced upon them that there was a professed Christian nation more faithless and savage and murderous than the most barbarous people of whom history has given any record.

Mr. Archibald Hurd, in his book, Ordeal By Sea, just published by Jarrolds, Limited, London, which tells the story of the British seamen's fight for freedom, sets before the reader with deadly accuracy and moving power the sea-crimes of Germany, and makes us understand why British seamen have pledged themselves to have no more to do with German ships and ports and merchandise. To read the book is to experience again that feeling of horror and of loathing inspired by the sinking of the Lusitania; the shelling of defenceless coast towns; the sinking of hospital ships; the taking of life-belts from the crew of a British trawler and then submerging to leave the men to drown; the devilish laughter that greeted the seizure of members of a British boat's crew by sharks when their boat had been sunk; the murder of Capt. Fryatt; and all the long list of murderous acts which have revealed the German in a true light as the arch-enemy of human history.

This book, Ordeal By Sea, should be read for two reasons: First, because it reveals the dauntless heroism and the nobility of the British seaman; and, second, because it shows how utterly insane would be any policy based upon tolerance placed in the faith, or the humanity of Germany. It is a glorious record for Britain's men of the sea, but a terrible and unanswerable indictment of the Hun.

Consider the courage of seamen who were on torpedoed vessels time after time and on their return to port shipped immediately on other vessels in order that there should be no interruption of the movement of food and supplies for their country. Consider the fishermen facing death in an awful form in order to keep up the food supply. Consider the crews of torpedoed vessels standing by to render every assistance to others, risking not of their own lives. Consider the engineers and wireless operators and firemen remaining at their posts and going down with the ship. Then by contrast think of the Prussian soldier prisoners on a torpedoed hospital ship in the Channel, who had to be beaten back from the life-boats to give the wounded and nurses a chance, and who actually seized one boat and in their frenzy overturned it and fell into the sea.

Mr. Hurd shows that every article of the code of the brotherhood of the sea, as it is and has been recognized and observed by the free nations of the earth, has been violated by the Germans. From the actual record he tells the story of submarine atrocities, and by contrast cites from history instances of how different has been the record of the British, French, American and other navies. He takes up and exposes clearly the falsehood of the German excuses put forth in palliation of their crimes. Contrasting British and German, he says:

"On the one hand the world has witnessed a triumphant vindication of those principles of law and humanity which the civilized peoples hold in common; on the other it has watched the rising crescendo of outrage committed by men professing to be the agents of 'Kultur.' German sailors have broken the vows of the brotherhood of the sea as no pirates in the past ever broke them, to expiate their crimes on the gallows, for the modern Huns have not only destroyed property, sending millions of pounds' worth of goods to the bottom of the sea to rot, but they have strewn the beds of the oceans with thousands of corpses of unarmed men, defenceless women and little children, their souls stainless before the eyes of God and man. That constitutes the condemnation of Germany for all time, and the spirit in which the sailors of our blood have opposed those acts represents a glorious record which will never be forgotten."

Let it be said that the German sailors and soldiers did not represent the real German people. Mr. Hurd reproduces the medal which was struck in Munich to commemorate the sinking of the Lusitania, with 1,198 lives, and quotes a German newspaper which said: "With joyful pride we contemplate this latest deed of our navy, and it will not be the last." The Cologne Gazette said: "The news will be received by the German people with unanimous satisfaction." It is well to have this record in mind in these days when Germany is trying to get by diplomacy what she failed to get by murder and pillage.

The better war news should so cheer the people of St. John and the province at large as to prompt them to make the Victory Loan a complete success. The money is needed and the people can subscribe every dollar assigned to this province without hardship to themselves. Not only so, but they will be putting aside something for a rainy day.

Today's cables tell of further barbarity perpetrated by the Germans in Belgium. The supreme war council at Versailles should take note of it.

A Victory Loan in Germany just now would not be over-subscribed. It's different in Canada. Have you got your bond?

Go up to King square tonight and buy a Victory Bond—if you have not already bought one.

Emperor Charles is prepared to abdicate. The Kaiser's turn should come soon.

Every hour on the western front Foch is giving Germany another reason for a revolution.

The men at the front have gone across. Have you come across yet? Buy a bond.

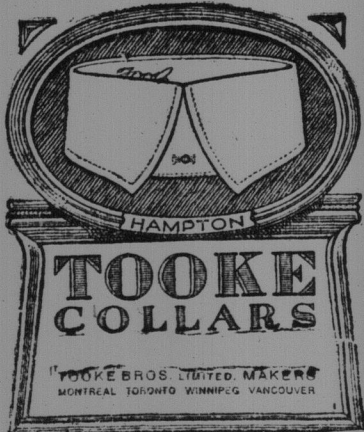

This must be the big week for Victory bond sales. Help it along.

JUST LIKE ST. JOHN.

(Ottawa Journal-Press.) Several letters have been written to The Journal recently complaining that the "No Spitting By-law" is not being enforced in Ottawa at the present time as strictly as the health situation would seem to demand. We fear there is a good deal of justification for these complaints.

For several years after the passage of the bylaw there was a marked improvement, and, doubtless, even today the conditions are not as bad as they were before the regulation was passed against the disgusting practice. It would be a pity, however, if the bylaw should be allowed to take its place among the rather large number of other bylaws ignored in the breach. Possibly the attention that has been drawn to the matter will cause the chief of police to remind his men of their duty in this regard.

CLOSING IN ON GHEENT SUNDAY

Scene In Valenciennes As Canadians Entered

CIVILIANS SENT TO MONS

Some, However, Remained Through the Fighting—Domination Soldiers Complete Work of Clearing Out German Snipers

With the Allied Armies in France and Belgium, Nov. 3.—(By the Associated Press, noon).—The Franco-Belgian troops this morning had reached a line within five miles of Ghent. French cavalry last night were reported at St. Denis-Western railway station, about three miles southwest of the city.

In the meantime French and American forces occupied Audenarde, farther south. Americans had battled their way across the Scheldt between Heurne and Eyne, to the north of Audenarde.

The Allied line in front of Ghent at latest reports lay approximately north to south, through Oostvelde, Vinderhaute, east of Wildendriesch and Laethem-St. Martin, with cavalry advancing toward Ghent from the southwest.

Valenciennes this morning was virtually free of German machine gunners who were left behind to fight rear guard actions when the enemy withdrew on Friday night, and today lay well behind the consolidated British line, which ran approximately between St. Saut and Peseau, both of which places were captured yesterday.

Five thousand civilians had remained behind in Valenciennes throughout the fighting. The remainder, about 20,000, were evacuated by the Germans during the last week, principally to Mons. Some of the residents yesterday and last night lost their lives as a result of a further enemy bombardment with high explosives and gas shells.

The correspondent entered the city this morning through the western gate. All the bridges across the Scheldt had been destroyed by the retreating Germans. The outskirts of the place were in ruins from the bombardment. The "City of Loos," which it was expected might be found virtually intact, was a sad sight until the centre of the municipality was reached. Here practically no damage was done.

The beautiful Hotel De Ville, was intact except for trifling marks from two stray shells.

The Canadians had established a satisfactory line east of Valenciennes by nightfall yesterday. Within the city remained the work of mopping up the German machine gunners hidden in buildings and waiting to snipe the advancing troops. The Canadians went about the business systematically and by this morning had accounted for every German so far as they knew.
