AERIAL TRANSPORT ACROSS CHANNEL

Proposal to Award Sum of £2,000 for First Four Trips in One Week

ed in the Old Country by the news that the Ligue Aerienne of France has been in negotiation with the municipalities of Boulogne and Folkestone with a view to the foundation of prizes for the inauguration of aerial transport between France and England. It is proposed to award the sum of £2000 to the first airman who completes the journey between Boulogne and Folkestone and back again four times within one week, and carrying one or two passengers.

Aerial League of the British Empire, said that the marvelous achievements of the past few months, which had exnations of the most enthusiastic bellevers in the future of aerial flight, made it probable that before the year was out the feat would be accomp ed and the prize won. Mr. Marples was present at the Boulogne meeting, at which it was suggested that in order to make the conditions more difficult a ed to be so constructed that it could and rise again at will. Mr. Marples hinted that a machine fulfilling these conditions was already in existence, but details were at present lacking. "The advent of such a machine," he added, 'would mark a great advance, and titions will be organized in which aerowater and ascend again, just as they

The question of safety appliances for aviators was discussed at the Boulogne meeting, and Mr. Marples is of opinion that at the proposed international competition for such appliances many striking inventions will be seen. Mr Rudyard Kipling's idea of an inflated
