A SCHOOL FOR COW-BOYS IN ENGLAND.

In England a school has been organized for the purpose of training boys who wish to become cowboys, in the life of the ranch as it is lived in the North-West Territories. A great deal of interest is being taken in the scheme by prominent men who are interested in the well-being of the colonies. It is expected that the school will be opened in a few weeks' time.

The problem of the younger son seems likely to be solved. He need no longer go out to the colonies, there to go through the painful process of being licked from the tenderfoot stage to that of the wiry and hard-hearted frontiersman.

Today he can get through these painful early stages and learn to be a complete rancher within twelve miles of London, England, for a miniature ranch has been started near the banks of the Thames at Shepperton. There two experienced cowboys have opened a school where the young Englishman—or rather English boy, for they prefer to catch the future rancher young—is taught in six months, a lesson which would take him years to learn by bitter experience.

FRONTIERSMAN'S LIFE.

The principal of the school is a Mr. French, and when a contract for a six months' course has been signed and $750 dollars has been paid, he takes complete charge of the young frontiersman. Once under his care, the pupil lives the life of the frontiersman to the full. There is no going back. If he finds the life too hard he cannot leave and then come back. He either stays the whole time or goes away altogether, with his $750 returned. In winter he must sleep in a house of corrugated iron and round boarding. A hard bunk and Army blankets are his bed; Irish stew his chief food. In summer his home is a bell-tent.

DAY'S WORK.

He starts at five o'clock in the morning, and from then until a hard day's work has been done he will be living the life of the plains, although within a very few miles of London civilization. One of the chief things he will have to learn is the care of his horse. He is taught to be a "vet" and to be his own groom, just as he is his own servant. One of this first lesson is how to handle his horse. Then he learns how to ride on Colonial and Mexican saddles. After that he is taught how to throw a restive horse, and when he has learnt to pack a pack saddle and to do the other little things that make life easy for the frontiersman, he is instructed in the other arts of his trade. There is a small herd of cattle on which he is taught the art of driving a herd. Then comes the stock-whip, and he has to learn to wield twenty-four feet of heavy lash till he can, in the language of the cowboy, "cut any odd hair" of a galloping steer.

WORK WITH THE LASSO.

The lasso is his next lesson, and until he can rope a horse or bullock at full speed so as to catch him either by the neck or leg he is not to be considered proficient.

When he can do all these things and has also learned such odds and ends as digging potatoes, washing his own shirt, making his own fire and then cooking his own dinner over it in a tin can, he is considered to have learned the equivalent of his $750 and to be fit to make his way in the colonies. He has done all this in six months which have given him a busy time.

A number of well-known people, including Lord Roberts, are interested in the experiment, and as at present arranged there is to be a formal opening of the enterprise in a few weeks.

THE ARMY LIFE OF THE LAST CENTURY.

Life in the army was not always the serious business it is now. And striking evidence of this fact is to be found in the diary of General William Dwyer, which has just been published.

In those days the army was regarded by the aristocratic classes more in the light of an enjoyable occupation than of a serious profession. Dwyer belonged to the ranks of the upper ten, but notwithstanding that he was to have been a good regimental officer with some special charm. He was quartermaster in Ireland during the most of his early years, constant hard drinking, varied by occasional long marches, and a little love thrown in to give spice to existence, were to have been the chief features of his military life.

Later on he was for some time on foreign service in Nova Scotia. While there he became very intimate with Prince William Henry, afterwards King William Henry, who was then a naval officer. Out there together these two, with their brother officers, appear to have had what may be mildly described as a good time. The drinking records beat even those of Ireland. Here is a specimen of a dinner given by H. R. H. as "Superior" to the Order of the Blue and Orange, when Dwyer acted as "Vice."

LAUGHABLE SIGHT.

"We had a very good dinner and he sent me of his own. We had the Grenadiers drawn up in front of the mess-room windows to fire a volley in honor of the toast. As soon as dinner was over he began. He did not drink himself, he always drank Madeira. He took very good care to see everybody else, and he gave twenty-three bumpers without a halt. In the course of my experience I never saw such fair drinking."

"When he had finished his list of bumpers, I begged leave to give to the Society to stand upon our chairs with three times three, taking them from the vice. I think it was the most laughable sight I ever beheld, to see the Governor, our General, and the Commanders, all so drunk that they could scarcely stand on the floor, hoisted up on their chairs with each a bumper in his hand; and the three times three cheers was what they were afraid to attempt for fear of falling. I then proposed H. R. H. and a good wind whenever he sailed, with the same ceremony. He stood at the head of the table during both these toasts, and I never saw a man laugh so in my life. When we had drunk the last of the Governor desired to know if we had any more, as he said if he once got down he should never get up again. H. R. H. said we were all pretty well done, and he walked off. There were thirty-three bumpers and we drank sixty-three bottles of wine."

In striking contrast, however, to this familiarity, the General discusses somewhat severely later on the character of the Royal scoupage.

LOST ON LONELY ROCK.

Another amusing incident occurred while the diarist was travelling to his regiment in Ireland in 1781.

"When I had travelled about an hour I was awakened by the chase stopping, when the post-boy did me the satisfaction of telling me he was lost for which I made him a low bow and then kicked him. It was in the middle of an immense forest, and not near light. I stood gazing about for an hour, and at last described a house at a good distance from us, which we made for, but on our way there we were so untrusty as to get the chase overturned. When we got to the house the man told us we were about four miles from the road, but that he would take us a short cut. I asked the man where we were, and he said in the forest of Chanery. I think if we had not seen his house there was not another within five miles of the place. I asked him what the house was. He said, 'Did you never hear of the Lawless House?' To which I replied in the negative. He said that house was not within any parish, did not pay any rates or levies."

Dwyer did not see much of war, although he saw service in the West Indies and was present at the siege of Alexandria and afterwards in the Peninsular expedition. Historically his notes on the last affair are probably the most valuable thing in the diary.

At the end of Chatham had left, he was for a time second in command, and his splendid physique kept him fit till he returned home. He had previously sailed for Portugal to reinforce Moore, but had been ordered back on the news of Cornwall.

Dwyer seems to have had a burning contempt for the War Office of his days and does not appear to have been impressed much by Wellington.

After leaving the army he settled down to an interesting social life as a "bon vivant." He held out long, and he was a most devoted father to his children, whose mother had eloped and been divorced.

7,000,000 ACRES SEED TO WHEAT

Western Crop Expected to Exceed Previous Records.

Informal Estimate Places 1908 Wheat Yield at 125,000,000 Bushels if Conditions Favor.

WINNIPEG, May 7.—Reports received from Western points indicate that the increase in wheat acreage this year will be tremendous. Local grain men are already making their estimates of what the western wheat crop will be, and conservative men have stated that in their opinion 125,000,000 bushels of wheat alone will be threshed out in 1908.

An estimate regarding wheat acreage made by W. H. McWilliams, an American prominent in the Winnipeg grain trade and president of the Canadian Elevator Company, makes very interesting reading. He had reports from every section of the west, and says that 7,000,000 acres will be seeded to wheat alone, an increase of 2,000,000 acres over last year. The increase in coarse grains is also expected to be very large, farmers seeding more and more acreage of oats and barley.

A Calgary despatch states that the winter wheat crop in the country south of the C. P. R. will be by far the largest in the history of that branch of farming in the west, conditions for its early growth having been ideal.

Settlers from the United States continue to pour into this country. A great many of the better class of settlers from Iowa, Indiana, Illinois, and Michigan are purchasing land in the country tributary to Winnipeg and one firm which makes a specialty of bringing in farmers from the first named state, disposed of 1,500 acres the other day.

Cabbage grows all the year in Hawke, and it apparently makes no difference whether it is planted in the spring, summer, autumn or winter.

BANDIT'S BODY FOUND ON PRAIRIE.

Clothes Had Been Burned to Prevent Identification.

Companions Had Carried Him Into Canadian Territory, Where It is Supposed He Perished.

EMERSON, Man, May 8.—Two other members of the gang of American bank robbers, who robbed the bank at Stephen, Minn., of $8,000 and who made their way across the border yesterday were captured south of here this morning after an exciting chase.

While detectives were scouring the prairie south of here, near the American line, the startling discovery of a dead man's body was made eight miles north of the American line. Near the body was a small pile of ashes indicating that the dead man's clothing had been burned for the purpose of destroying all clue to his identity.

The dead man was doubtless the man shot from the roof of the Seaside Bank when that institution was robbed. One merchant fired five shots at the robbers and took refuge behind a chimney, escaping a fusillade from the bandits.

"Say, there's a mistake in this bill you sent me the other day."

"What's wrong with it? Is it too big?"

"No, but—"

"Any mistake in the figures?"

"No; it's not that. It's—"

"Don't you think that bill has been running long enough?"

"I reckon so, but—"

"Then what are you kicking about?"

"That's what I'm trying to tell you. There's a mistake in the name. You sent it to the wrong man, and found out you'd sent me a cent and not a ver dollar."

PLAY "NIGHT RIDERS" ON "DAD" AND LOSE.

Warning Notice Transferred to Their Breaches, and Then Carried Out.

OWENSVILLE, Ind., May 7.—A farmer in Posey county planned to raise a crop of tobacco this year for home consumption only. His two sons, 15 and 11 years old, assumed the role of night riders. They cut a lot of lumber and placed them at the front door of the house. On the door they tacked this sign:

"Old Man: If you raise any tobacco this year there will be a raised here. Night Riders."

From a window in the kitchen the father looked out the work of the boys and when they were fast asleep he stole into their rooms. In the trousers legs and on the seat of their pants was attached the following sign:

"Night Riders: Meet me at barn at 7 o'clock in the morning when raising will begin. Old Man."

The boys met the father at the appointed hour.

CALLS TAILOR PROOF OF MAN'S DEPRAVITY.

Sinless Beings, Like Animals, Would Need No Clothes, Says Pastor.

PHILADELPHIA, May 7.—That the existence of the tailor is proof of the depravity of man was the statement yesterday of the Rev. F. W. Farr, of the Bethlehem Baptist Church, before the Expository Bible Conference at Temple Lutheran Church, Fifty-second and Arch streets.

"Man is the only creature which wears clothes," he said, "and he robs other creatures to provide raiment for himself. The Biblical statement that Adam and Eve were both naked when discovered in the Garden of Eden, and that they were not ashamed, is sometimes regarded as strange. Yet we must remember that God made the first man in His image, and that He was clothed in light. He had a luminous garb, possibly an incandescent raiment. Just as soon as he sinned he became a naked, opaque, repulsive being."
