

Has Devoted Life to Saving Girls

Mrs. Frances M. Foster, a Graduate of Radcliffe College, Spent Months in the Underworld.

Her Evidence in Court Convicted Dealers in the White Slave Traffic.

New York, May 26.—The sacrifice which Frances M. Foster has made to help destroy white slavery by which thousands of girls are dragged down every year into shame almost surpasses belief.

In the battle against white slavery Mrs. Foster risked everything that a woman holds dear, for she entered the very depths of the underworld, associating with the lowest barterers in human bodies and souls and representing herself to be one of them.

HETTY GREEN LOSES $569

World's Richest Woman Very Angry When She Lost Suit in New York Court—Will Appeal.

New York, N. Y., May 26.—When Mrs. Hetty Green, reputed to be the wealthiest woman in the United States if not in the world, heard a jury give a verdict against her for $569.25 before Judge O'Dwyer in the city court yesterday she trembled for a moment with suppressed emotion and finally gave vent to her anger.

"It's an outrageous and insulting stamping her foot on the floor feebly, and she was led out of the court by her counsel talking about the impossibility of a woman getting justice."

The action was brought by the Safe Deposit Company of New York, in the Slinger building, and was to recover $550 and interest for eleven boxes of books and papers for five years. The documents represented part of her father's estate and are said to have a market value of $17,000,000.

She appeared in court accompanied by a maid. She wore a plain black skirt, a black silk coat, black kid gloves, and a long black hat. Mrs. Green took a seat beside her counsel, Louis F. Doyle, and as the jury entered the box she scanned each man with a critical eye.

"Juries have always been good to me," she said to a group of reporters, "and I don't expect they are going to turn against me now."

Dr. William A. Mitchell, second vice-president of the company bringing the suit, was the first witness. He testified the eleven boxes had been in the custody of the company for a considerable time, and that Mrs. Green in 1904 had paid $600 for storage of them within the city court.

Her testimony caused the conviction of Belle Moore, a negro who had sold her two girls.

Mrs. Foster, who has dedicated her life to helping others, was assigned to Seattle in the white slave hunt. She was to help George A. Miller, a New York detective. They plunged into the underworld.

Night after night they witnessed scenes that were distressing. Mrs. Foster assumed a bravado that was not hers. They had thousands of dollars to spend.

"I went by the name of Frankie Fuller," says Mrs. Foster. "After we had gained the confidence of the people of the underworld in Seattle we told them we wanted to buy young girls, and they told us to go east. They gave us letters and much information which helped us gain entrance to the underworld circles of New York."

Mrs. Foster had never been on a witness stand or in a court room before she testified in the white slavery case. Occasionally she flushed or stammered, but then, as if realizing that her motives had been high and her staid had been the souls of thousands of American girls, she would straighten up proudly.

Even now, after the conviction of the prisoner, little is made public regarding Mrs. Foster's identity. When the officials asked the reporters to respect the woman's natural desire for secrecy and to remember the sacrifices she had already made, they agreed, with one accord, not to pry into her private life.

She refused to be married in 1900, but that she was not living with her husband. The judge generously protected her from further questions regarding her private life.

It was not until after the conviction of Belle Moore that Mrs. Foster's identity was revealed. During the trial she was known as "Mrs. Foster, married though separated from her husband." The judge refused to allow her the defense to ask any questions relating to Mrs. Foster's private life.

She is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Drury of Somerville, Mass., and wife of Edwin L. Foster, an attorney of San Francisco. She graduated from Radcliffe college with honors in the class of '08, when she was twenty years old.

MODES IN SODA DRINKS

Like Clothes, the Decoctions Served by the White-Coated Clerks Obey the Behest of Fashion.

Styles in soda fountain drinks change as do those in clothes and etiquette. There was a time when one asked either for a soda or a phosphate but now these things have been relegated to the background and have been replaced by the Sundae, the Frappe, the Poutre, the Coupe, or the parfait.

If one doesn't know the one from the other, or imagines for an instant, that the last may be had for the price of the first, one is far behind the times. The differences may seem slight, but they must be mastered lest one incur the scorn of the soda clerk.

The distinguishing characteristics in short are these: The Sundae was the first fizzes invention of the confectioner. It consists of ice cream and a sticky sauce or fruit syrup. The Frappe is like unto it, with a little dab of whipped cream on top, and perhaps, when the times or the generosity of the shopkeeper permit, a candied cherry. The Poutre is a more liquid concoction consisting of milk, cream, syrup and ice cream, shaken vigorously and served in high tumblers with a straw. It has made its way slowly from Detroit and other western cities where it has flourished for many years under the name of a cream shake.

The parfait is again more like the frappe, except for the fact that the cream and syrup are mixed with some of the fruit, this being colored mass that is served in a high, slender glass and garnished with a maraschino cherry.

The coupe is perhaps the most wonderful of all. In fact, it is so wonderful that it may be called only by the names of famous opera stars. There are three kinds—Nobla, Nordica, and Gadske—containing respectively peaches, raspberries and strawberries in a deep, round dish the mixer puts some of the fruit, this being covered with ice cream, and over the whole he pours the thickest and the richest of fruit syrups.

If the beverages themselves do not change from season to season, then their names and titles must respond to the whims of Dame Fashion. Once upon a time a cherry sundae was a Merry Widow. Now it is a Chanticleer. The chocolate nut sundae was called Sagi Harris for a while, then Alice Roosevelt, and now the Jungles. The complaint having been shifted from daughter to parent.

Whenever a play makes a big hit or a man does a big thing, the soda clerks are among the first to make use of the event. They made up a Wright brothers frappe and a north pole sundae. "No, I did not," she replied. "They were stolen out of my father's estate."

"Then Dr. Mitchell was mistaken when he said you agreed to pay the amount personally for their storage?" "No, I did not," she replied. "They were stolen out of my father's estate."

Miss Harriman Weds Sculptor Rumsey

New York, N. Y., May 26.—In the Episcopal church at Arden, N. Y., Miss Mary Harriman, daughter of the late railroad master and builder, Edward H. Harriman, was wedded today to Charles Cary Rumsey, of Buffalo, a sculptor. Simplicity marked the ceremony. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. Holmes McGuinness, rector of the church, and afterwards the wedding party returned to the Harriman house for the wedding breakfast.

EDUCATED WOMAN COMMITS SUICIDE

New York, May 26.—A woman known as Mrs. Carrie M. Hyatt killed herself with a revolver in her apartment at No. 75 West 44th street yesterday afternoon. When she went out in the morning she asked the janitor to clean up her rooms, and when she returned about 4 o'clock in the afternoon she thanked the woman and went upstairs. Mrs. Hyatt had not closed the door of her room more than five minutes when two shots were heard. She was found lying on the floor, and Dr. J. M. De Bermingham, of No. 106 West 43rd street, said that she had died instantly, one of the wounds proving fatal.

It was learned that the woman returned two weeks ago from Liverpool, where she was a woman of education and some refinement. French and German books and standard English literature being on her bookshelves and tables.

KILLED BY A WOMAN

Burglar Who Entered Apartments of Mrs. Dora Gietman in New York Gets More Than He Bargained For.

New York, May 26.—Louis Gratch, 25 years old, painter by day and burglar by night, was discovered by Mrs. Dora Gietman in her apartments on the third floor of a Delancey street house today and after beat the man with a cuspidor until he backed against a window with a low sill, was smashing him across the face with a rolling pin, when he toppled to instant death on the concrete pavement fifty feet below. Gratch got into the house by climbing up the fire escape. He was searching Gietman's clothing for money when Mrs. Gietman awoke suddenly and screamed. She leaped out of bed and seized the man. Enraged more than frightened, Mrs. Gietman pushed him into the kitchen, where she seized an iron cuspidor and struck him over the head and shoulders with it.

The man broke away and made for the harbor. Mrs. Gietman pursued him and seized him by the collar. She held him until a boy header, who had been aroused, ran up and landed her a rolling pin. With this she belabored Gratch furiously. Two or three blows were effective and as the man struggled in front of the window he toppled headlong into the yard. An ambulance surgeon found that Gratch had died of a broken neck caused by the fall.

WOMEN ARE IN EARNEST

Intend to Press Demand for Right to Address Presbyterian Meetings—All the Southern States Interested.

Lewisburg, W. Va., May 26.—At first the general assembly of the southern Presbyterian church was inclined to give scant consideration to the overture of the Lafayette church, of New Orleans, for information as to whether or not the church still maintained its position in opposition to women addressing gatherings in which both men and women were assembled. Now it has become a serious question.

"Were any frivolous overtures received today?" inquired a minister, who did not arrive in Lewisburg for the opening of the assembly. "Yes," was the response of a fellow minister. "Some church wanted to know about women talking." But after the committee on bills and overtures was appointed the advocates of women made it known they were in earnest. They argued that with the Methodists, Baptists and other denominations permitting women to speak in all assemblies, the Presbyterians were behind the times.

MISS REQUA TO PRESS SUIT

Miss Requa, Once Physical Director, Studies Law in Order to Institute Action to Compel Reinstatement.

New York, May 26.—Determined to present her own case in her own way, Miss Mary Requa studied law and was admitted to practice. She appeared in the Supreme Court yesterday and argued in support of proceedings she has instituted and by which she hopes to obtain reinstatement as Director of Physical Training in the school department. She was dismissed by the Board of Education seven years ago.

Miss Requa told Judge Erlanger that she had conferred with many lawyers, but that none seemed to think she had ground for action. She declared that she would carry her case to the highest courts.

She contended that the position held was created by statute and that the board had no right to give her place to Luther H. Gulick, the present director of physical training.

Assistant Corporation Counsel McIntyre argued that Miss Requa's delay in making her application was fatal. He said that the trouble arose when the schools of New York city were consolidated. When Mr. Gulick was appointed Miss Requa retained her position in Manhattan her salary of $2,000 a year being undisturbed.

She objected to being superseded by a man. Mr. McIntyre said and insisted that she would not have "assistant" tacked in front of her title. Charges against her were made. She was tried and dismissed.

Judge Erlanger said that he would give careful attention to the matter but stated that he feared the seven years of delay would cause her action to fail.

Little Girls Need Exercise to Keep Them in Proper Health

Fathers and mothers, are your little girls getting out of doors, where the sun shines gloriously and the air is fresh and pure? Or are they penned up between four walls from daybreak to sunset?

Do your little girls get the proper exercise to give them vigorous, healthy bodies, or do they play with their dolls and toys from breakfast to supper?

They need the out-of-doors exercise. They need it to grow into strong, beautiful womanhood. The exercises need not be confined to a gymnasium, nor taken under the watchful eye of an athletic instructor. As much good may be done in the back yard or in a bedroom with open windows, and father, mother or brother may be the instructor. Care must be taken to see that the little girls do not indulge in the exercises too long or too vigorously, especially at first.
