TUESDAY EVENING, MARCH 23.

Civil Service Reform.

Mr. Casey has had the method of making Civil Service appointments under discussion, his resolution setting forth that the present system is not the most convenient, nor the one best calculated to obtain efficient public officers, and that it would be expedient to substitute for it, as far as the exigencies of the service will allow, a system of open competitive examination. Mr. Casey showed, in a speech that evinced considerable research, that the present system gave the appointing power, for all practical purposes, to Government supporters in the House of Commons, who were, again, influenced by prominent constituents. There is no guarantor, therefore, that those who are chosen for the public service are fit to be entrusted with public business. The system is unfair, also, as it deprives the people of counties represented by Opposition members of all share in the public patronage. Mr. Casey detailed the experience of England in respect to competitive examinations, showed the advantages that had followed the adoption of the system and had led to its extension, answered objections that had been raised, and pointed out the evils of the American system and deplored the present tendency towards its introduction into Canada. Mr. Palmer, the only New Brunswick member who took part in the debate, is thus reported in Hansard:

Mr. Palmer was glad the matter had been brought before the House, not so much from a desire to discuss its general principles as to draw the attention of the House and the country to certain prominent evils in the working of the present system. Whether the suggestion of the hon. member for Elgin was adopted or not, he thought that the head officers in the different departments should be taken from men who had been trained in the department; that those who occupied lower places should be advanced to the more prominent positions as vacancies occurred, and that they should not have placed over them persons who were brought into the department for political or other reasons. In his own constituency there had been instances of flagrant wrong in the public services. It was exceedingly hard that young men who had served the Government and the country well could not receive the promotion they deserved, while others were placed over them for political reasons. Those evils he was satisfied were greater and more frequent the more distant they were from the centre of Govt. They operated very much against the smaller, or rather the more distant Provinces, because there, faithful and long service was not seen by the head of the department who must discriminate between the faithful and the negligent servant in the public service. He hoped to see rectified another principle that had been ignored. In the different Provinces public servants were doing exactly the same amount of work in the different departments, but were paid differently, and that too often was regulated by the size of the Province. The circumstances of Manitoba were somewhat different, but with reference to the old Provinces—Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, and Prince Edward Island—here the cost of living and the state of society was about the same. He could see no earthly reason why public servants of every description doing the same amount of service, and the same service, should not be paid the same amount of salary. He was not going to detain the House now to point out—as he could point out—a great inequality in the salaries of those officers, and he knew a great many officers who felt themselves much aggrieved by this state of things.

The Premier followed, admitting the validity of many of the arguments that had been used in favor of the change proposed, and suggesting the withdrawal of the resolutions. Mr. Casey yielded to the suggestion, stating that he would bring the matter up next session and submit a detailed scheme for bringing the competitive system into practice.

Mr. Palmer and the Fredericton Land Denials.

We have already published the denials of the Messrs. Burpee respecting the Fredericton land matter. The telegrams were very clear as to everything except Mr. Palmer's connection with the case, in respect to which they were widely at variance. It appears by the official report that Mr. Chas. Burpee, in denying the charges made against him and the members of his family in the House, associated Mr. Palmer's name with the charges, and Mr. Palmer's reply was reported with many variations. The telegram to the News was particularly erroneous, almost as much so as the despatch in the Telegraph that made Mr. Palmer support the Navy Island bridge project. What Mr. Palmer really said, as officially reported in Hansard, is as follows:

Mr. Palmer was extremely sorry that his hon. friend from Sunbury should have brought his (Mr. Palmer's) name up in connection with this matter. With reference to the paper, which is stated to be his organ, he might say that he had no more control over the articles which appeared in its columns than the hon. gentleman himself. He (Mr. Palmer) had nothing to do with any of the charges, and in fact knew nothing of the transaction, except in so as the Mayor of Fredericton had mentioned it to him. That gentleman had applied to him (Mr. Palmer) stating not at all what the hon. member for Sunbury had stated in this House, but simply that Mr. E. R. Burpee, being one of the principal owners of the Fredericton Branch Railway, and Mr. Temple, the President of the Company, had purchased from the Dominion of Canada land worth $30,000 for $6,000, and that an order in Council had been passed for the transfer of the land. He said that he (the Mayor) did not know whether the Government could cancel the Order in Council or not, and he called on him (Mr. Palmer) to have the matter thoroughly investigated in the House of Commons in case it was not cancelled. Afterwards he (Mr. Palmer) understood that the Order was cancelled, and he had nothing more to do with it. He had not the slightest feeling in the matter, nor had he the slightest desire to cast obloquy on any member of this House. He had not read this article at all, and he had only to say that it was wrong in so far as it stated that he (Mr. Palmer) placed any notice on the paper or said he would.

Mr. Domville has called for all the papers in the case, and the Government has promised them. They will show, according to the statements of Mr. Pickard and others, that the money ($6,000) was accepted by the Government and an Order in Council passed granting the land to the Fredericton Branch Railway Co., which order was cancelled after the character of the transaction was exposed.

It is settled that Chief Justice Ritchie is to be one of the Judges of the Supreme Court of Canada, and the question of his successor on the bench of the Supreme Court of New Brunswick is freely canvassed. The principal candidates in the field are Attorney General King and County Court Judge Watters. Mr. King claims the appointment by virtue of being "nominally at the head of the bar of this Province," and Judge Watters claims it as a fitting reward of his able services on the bench of the inferior court. The Judge has been in Ottawa lately, and it is certain that a strong pressure will be brought to bear on the Government in his favor.

"The Complete Letter Writer," by H. O'Leary, Esq., M. P. P., is in press, and will be issued in a few weeks. Lovers in want of epistolary aid should buy this work. Be not persuaded to waste your money on any other.

"Henry and Mary; or, Love and Lobsters: a Cuddling Tale of Acadia," is the title of a story to be written by Mrs. Fleming for a New York weekly.

The Jilting of Mary—"Now or Never"—Henry's Story.

The defendant, in his evidence given at the trial, confirms his former lady love's testimony in many particulars, and gives some additional facts of interest. It is not surprising that, after matters being allowed to go so far, the caressed Connaughton should be anxious to have the marriage take place, and there is nothing remarkable in her determined tone when, in answer to the note requesting a postponement of the ceremony, she said:

"I received a note from you to postpone our marriage but I will not wait a day. I am not going to be put down by the Brittains; it is now or never."

You are foolish, was O'Leary's reply to this; and then he told her that the children were crying because their aunt was going away. She replied that they could cry and get well again. It was hard, she thought, that she should be put down. It had been reported through town that she was to be married and if O'Leary would only make her his wife she would be content to stop at her father's house for a while. She seemed to take it hard," was the language of the defendant in giving his evidence. No doubt of it. To be almost Mrs. O'Leary, to be the topic of conversation for weeks, to have her prospects discussed and the details of the match known to every man, woman and child in Richibucto was an ordeal of itself. But to be rudely thrust back just as she was gaining the goal, to have the untasted cup of happiness shattered for ever, to sit on the rugged edge of fearful anticipation and finally to slip into the gloomy abyss of disappointment, was hard indeed. Put yourself in her place, gentle ladies, and then, if you can, fancy her feelings.

For some days the discussion of the subject was kept up by the former lovers, and all the time the cruelly disappointed Connaughton found the prospects of marriage growing "smaller by degrees, and beautifully less." The once fond lover had awakened from the enchantment, and he found, he says, that not only was she unfit to be a mother to his children but that they would always be miserable on account of her bad temper. She then intimated that the letters would be made public, but this did not frighten O'Leary into marriage, for, said he, it is better to be exposed than to lead a life of misery. It was evident that

Their lives thenceforth had separate paths
And never could be one again.

Mr. O'Leary denies that he declared he would marry for money, and says that he had no inducement to break the engagement, apart from his consideration for Miss Brittain and the children. The plaintiff was very loth to accept this excuse, but he told her that he would not marry her and get into misery. He would sooner face the letters and the court; so his "sooner" wish was gratified, and hence arose the suit brought by the woman who, a few months before, was happy in the contemplation of the many virtues of her loved O'Leary. "Are such angers in celestial minds?" It would seem so, and herein is afforded a striking instance of the wrath of "woman scorned."

OYSTERS.—We would advise the readers of THE TRIBUNE, especially those who are fond of oysters, to call on George Sparrow, at the head of King street, and try those splendid oysters which he has on sale. They are certainly the finest oysters in the city, and we think the only place where you get Shediac or Prince Edward Island oysters in St. John.

As caloric, electricity and phosphorous are induced and supplied by Fellows' Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites, it only requires the administration of this successful invention to forty the feeble, give sprightliness and motion to the torpid, and bring about a condition which not only secures tenaciousness of life BUT MAKES LIFE REALLY ENJOYALLE.

CATARRH IN THE AIR.—So it would almost seem by the hundreds who are suffering from its causes. Now don't do it any longer, but run to the nearest drug store and buy a box of Rœder's German Snuff. It will only cost you 35 cents.

A few drops of Dr. FORSTER'S IMPROVED ENAMELLINE upon a wet tooth brush forms a rich, creamy foam in the mouth, imparting a delightful fragrance to the breath, and thoroughly cleansing the teeth from all impurities. Call at the Drug Stores and get a sample bottle free.

Sudden Death.

A sudden death took place at the Paris House yesterday afternoon, the person dying being an old man named Forbes, belonging to Black River. He expired in a fit, a few moments after being attacked. An inquest was held this morning and a verdict returned in accordance with the facts.

"THE UNIVERSAL AYER."—On my journeys over the continent—through Turkey, India, China, Japan, Peru, Chili, Paraguay, Brazil and Mexico, and the United States—in them all to some extent and in some to a great extent, I have found the UNIVERSAL AYER represented by his family medicines, which are often held in fabulous esteem. Whether they win their marvelous reputation by their cures I know not, but I know they have it to such a degree that it frequently gave me a distinguished importance to have come from the same country.—Field's letters from abroad.

The Story of Annie McGinnis.

Between three and four months ago a young woman named Annie McGinnis came to this city from Sussex in search of employment. She was about 22 years of age, of pleasant appearance, and stated that she belonged in Miramichi, but that her sister resided in Sussex. She obtained work in the shoe factory of Valpey Bros., and took lodgings with Mr. Charles Burgess, who keeps a boarding house at the corner of Charlotte and Union streets. Of late the woman living in the house had reason to suspect that the young woman was "unfortunate," and from circumstances which occurred yesterday morning believed that she was about to be confined. The young woman refused to admit this, but attempted to explain her indisposition by alleging a sickness to which she was frequently subject. This, however, was not believed, and finally Dr. Addy was sent for. On his arrival he saw that there had been a delivery and inquired what had been done with the child. She attempted to deny the fact of a birth having taken place, but fell back in a fit and could not answer further questions. The doctor then instructed the people of the house to make a search, and after his departure they took advantage of the young woman's unconsciousness to examine the premises. The room was examined in vain, but at length they found the key of the unfortunate girl's trunk, hidden behind a wash stand. The trunk was opened and a new born male child found wrapped in an old skirt. The body was still warm, but life was extinct. Coroner Earle was notified and by his direction a post mortem of the body was made by Dr. Allison, assisted by Drs. T. J. O. Earle. They found that the child had been born alive, the lungs having been well inflated and sufficiently strong to support the heart, besides being buoyant enough to float. Other circumstances indicated that the child must have died from suffocation, though there were no marks of violence, save that one side of the face was somewhat discolored. An inquest was held at the Dead House last evening and the above facts were elicited on the examination of Chas. Burgess, Mary A. Burgess, Johnston Banks and Drs. Allison and Earle. The Coroner instructed the jury that it was their duty to carefully consider the evidence and give a verdict according to the facts. The benefit of any doubt should, of course, be given the suspected mother, but he cautioned them against allowing their sympathies with the unfortunate girl to induce them to give a verdict which would subject them to censure. After a careful deliberation the jury found that the circumstantial evidence was so strong that they could only make one return, and leave the matter to be judged in another court. They therefore found that Annie McGinnis had been delivered of the child upon which the inquest was held, and that such child came to its death at her hands. This leaves it to be determined whether such death was intentional or accidental. The circumstance of the mother having fits at the time is in her favor, as it is possible she may have overlain the child and thus caused the death. The young woman is still very ill and cannot at present be committed to jail. The jury at the inquest was as follows: B. P. Price, foreman; Geo. H. Whitney, Geo. Stanton, James H. Akerley, James W. Smith, Wm. Martin, Joseph W. Peary.

The Chief of Police received the Coroner's warrant this morning, and will have the woman guarded until she is strong enough to be removed to jail.

City Police Court.

Richard Gallagher, drunk on King Square, was fined $4 this morning.

William McCarty, charged with being one of the crowd by which Policeman Briggs was assaulted on St. Patrick's day, was brought before the Court this morning. The prisoner appeared sorry for having any part in the affair, and was willing to take the pledge and keep out of bad company if discharged. Briggs did not wish to prosecute, as McCarty is the son of a widow. The Magistrate allowed him to go on condition that he would take the pledge before a priest. The prisoner readily promised, and was the recipient of some monitory advice on the importance of keeping his pledge and the enormity of his offence if he broke it. The story of Ananias and Sapphira was pointed out as an awful example of what might overtake him if he violated his promise. He then left the Court with a penitent look in his eye.

James Scullion was fined $2 yesterday for selling two uninspected hides.

Three of the Polino's sailors applied at the Court for justice this morning, complaining that they were compelled to do work outside of their agreement, in the way of handling ashes, &c., on the wharf. They were sent about their business without their complaint being received.

Fowler and Williams, charged with having in their possession the stolen watch of Wm. Ansley, were liberated on bail yesterday, to appear when called for. It is not thought that they were guilty of stealing, and the police hope to find the actual thief some day.
