Housing problems under control will put the 292 students who would be displaced if the two residences were demolished.

A grad residence has been proposed but it is not known when it will be built. When application to Central Mortgage and Housing was made it was refused because no funds were available to them. Another complication is that the students' union and the grad students' association cannot agree on a site for the proposed residence.

Mr. Neal, vice-president in charge of Campus Planning and Development, feels there is no immediate cause for alarm by students about the university buying up homes in North Garneau.

The university is buying up homes east of 111th Street but he said that few students are presently living in this area. The Algonquin Apartments are not expected to be demolished but will be retained for possible future use as a university building.

Co-operative housing, or an experiment in "communal living" presents another solution to the problem of student housing. In a co-op several students get together, contribute a certain amount each month for food, and share in the household chores. It is cheaper than a university residence and the inhabitants make their own regulations.

"Conspiracy 8" trial

Dellinger, 13-year-old daughter of defendant David Dellinger.

In the shuffle, Anita Hoffman shouted, "you will be avenged" to the defendants, then spun away from marshalls and shouted at Judge Hoffman: "We'll dance on your grave, Julie. You're the emperor of the pig empire."

Defence attorneys declared they would appeal the convictions.

Following the announcement of the verdict, Judge Hoffman announced that Friday he would determine the impact of admitted government wire-tapping in the case.

Before the trial began last September, the defense asked Hoffman to dismiss the government's case because much of the evidence came from illegal wiretapping.

Hoffman said he would rule only if the trial produced convictions after a verdict.

He is expected to reject the defense motion.

Hoffman also rejected a defense motion for bail pending appeal of the convictions. "From the evidence in this case, from their conduct in this trial," he said, "I conclude that these are dangerous men to be at large."

At a subsequent news conference, Prosecutor Thomas Foran said "The verdict proved that the jury system works.

"I am satisfied because we got a verdict," he said. "If the verdict appears to be a compromise, that's the way the system works. Everybody's feelings are in the verdict."

Chicago mayor Richard Daley also expressed satisfaction at the verdict, saying it proved "that some people did come to our city to create a riot."

Defence attorney William Kunstler said the verdict was "an outrage" and declared that it was apparently a compromise between jurors determined to bring in a conviction and those holding out for an acquittal.

Kunstler said proof of such a compromise could serve as a ground for appeal. He said the defense planned to ask the appeals court for the right to interview jurors about how the verdict had been reached. Judge Hoffman forbade such questioning Wednesday.

At a protest rally Wednesday night, Kunstler urged 3,000 supporters of the "Conspiracy 8" to rally around the defendants and called for mass demonstrations against the legal system.

He announced a protest rally to be held Saturday outside the Chicago Federal Court Building where the conspiracy trial was held.

Immediately following the verdict in Chicago, demonstrations took place in Ann Arbor, Mich., Lawrence, Kan., Iowa City, and New York City.

At Ann Arbor, 1,800 demonstrators clashed with police following a University of Michigan rally called by Students for a Democratic Society to protest the verdict.

Five persons were arrested, 13 suffered minor injuries, and windows were smashed at four stores, two banks and in a police car.

In New York City, a crowd of 2,200 filled a Hunter College assembly hall to hear speakers denounce the Chicago verdicts and the New York trial of 13 Black Panthers. Plans to march to Times Square were cancelled after scores of police assembled outside the hall.

Other demonstrations were planned for yesterday at Boston, Salt Lake City, and Eugene, Ore.
