

Red Herrings win toss

By BOP REBOP

Last Sunday, UNB's Red Herrings won the AUSA invitational penguin tossing championship held in Dunder Head, Newfoundland. Going into the competition as the underdog team, UNB pulled off a remarkable upset when they defeated last year's champions, the University of Tuktoyaktuk Mukluks.

The Muks had a strong lead early in the eliminations, until team anchorman, Jim-Bob Whitefish was disqualified from tossing a rocket-propelled penguin. This hurt the Mukluks a great deal as it cost them a two-metre penalty on the next toss. The referees probably would not have spotted the twin ramjets Whitefish had inserted into his animal except for the fact that the penguin exploded on impact with the ground.

After the incident with the jet-powered bird, the Herrings moved up into third place, right behind the Aklavik Toreadors. Unfortunately for the T's, their star thrower put his bird directly into a set of nearby power lines. The animal then burst into flames, and what could have easily been a world record throw turned into a flaming dud. Henry T. Blubber's misfortune at having his throw disqualified proved to be our boy's big break.

The Herrings took advantage of the misfortunes of the two top-seeded team to take a narrow lead in the preliminaries.

BEV DUNNIT Photo

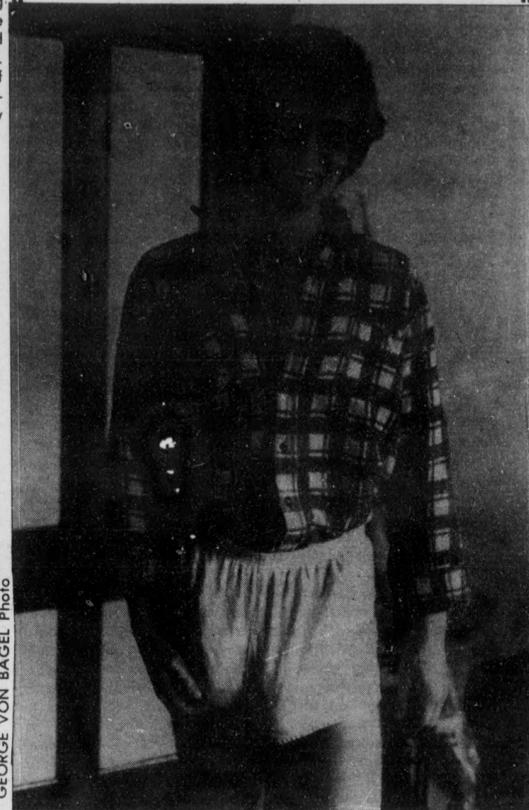

Disco dancing has been added to the Physical Education activities. Here a class practices the latest steps at the LB gymnasium.

Mud wrestling is UNB's newest varsity sport. Two team members are shown above practicing for next week's tournament. Don't miss it!

Bumshine boy

Don Tennant

GEORGE VON BAGEL Photo

Don Tennant is a student at UNB. He likes the great outdoors, girls that aren't conceited, and who don't mind paying for the date.

New track coach chosen

