HEADACHE.

Dr. E. SPORN, a German physician of much note, having devoted his attention for some years to the cure and removal of the causes of NERVOUS AND SICK HEADACHE, has the satisfaction to state, that he has a remedy which by removing the causes cures effectually and permanently this distressing complaint. There are many families who have considered Sick Headache a constitutional incurable family complaint. Dr. S. assures them that they are mistaken, and labouring under distress which might not only alleviate, but actually eradicate by the use of his remedy.

It is the result of scientific research, and is entirely of a different character from all patent medicines, and is not unpalatable to the taste. To be had of

F. I. SIMS,
MUSSON & SAVAGE,
BEGG & URQUHART.
Quebec, Sept. 1838.

PILES, DROPSY, SWELLINGS, ALL SORES, RHEUMATISM. It is absolutely asserted on the most positive proof that the above complaints are arrested and cured by the timely use of Hay's Lintment. It is impossible to find room in this paper to present those proofs which are conclusive and convincing. They may be seen at length below.

The true article has a splendid engrave wrapper with agents' and proprietor's name, and may be had of
F. I. SIMS,
MUSSON & SAVAGE,
BEGG & URQUHART.

ORIGINAL POETRY.

[For the Literary Transcript,
A KISS.

I've run of joys the pleasing range—I've drunk of every bliss, But never yet a pleasure found To match a mutual kiss.

It speaks while the bottom feels Through all its inmost string—With softest sympathy reveals Unutterable things.

O! when I press the dewy lip,
By equal warmth re-pressed,
In one that knows rapture sip—
I am divinely blessed.

O! all the joys to earth's given,
I seek no more but this—O! be my lip to build my heaven,
In one eternal kiss. D.

THE HISTORY OF A HEART.

Perhaps in any situation the continued attentions and devoted attachment of Henri might have created a reciprocal feeling in the heart of Julia; and, rejoiced as she now was from all other society, it is not surprising that she soon learned to love him with all the ardour of which her enthusiastic nature was capable.
Yet her mutual affection was felt and un-designed, rather than expressed. They both themselves up to the dominion of the new and delightful feeling which had taken possession of them, without daring to look into the consequences of their rashness. Thus months passed on, the lovers continued to enjoy their present happiness, regardless of the future, when suddenly Mr. Wilnot was awakened from his unsuspecting security by a letter from the Duke de—, reproaching him in the most violent manner for his presumption in aspiring to a connexion with the most ancient family in France, and accusing him of promoting a clandestine intimacy between Henri and his daughter. The indignant old man hastened to demand an explanation from Henri; but what was his surprise, when he learned that Henri had written to his father, renouncing the intended marriage, which had been so long fixed upon, and indicating the duke's low, fixed mean, and indicating the duke's consent to his union with a noble Americaine. The anger of Mr. Wilnot exceeded all bounds when he first learned the extent of the unthought of evil. The sturdy republican would have assisted at his daughter's obscurities almost as willingly as he would have given his hand to one of noble birth—to one who would have considered herself entitled to look with contempt on the humble family of the distinguished American. He was a very proud man, proud of his country, proud of his daughter, proud of the talents which had raised him to eminence; and all the bitterness of his nature was aroused by the unthought of insult offered him by the duke. He rebuked his daughter to see Henri, and called down a father's curse upon her head if ever she allowed the details of duty to be silenced by the voice of love. To describe the misery of the lovers would be a vain attempt. The pride of Julia had been severely wounded by the duke's insultful letter; and she had given her father a solemn promise, that on no pretext would she ever induce her to enter the family of the haughty noble; and in the first moments of mortification she had refused her lover the interview which he solicited. Henri flew to Paris, and implored the compassion of his uncle's parent; but the duke was inexorable; he ordered Henri to prepare for his marriage in three days; and to insure his obedience, the enraged father imprudently determined to keep him in close confinement till the evening of his intended nuptials. The spirit of Henri was galled to desecration by such unmerited harshness and insult. The night previous to that which his father had fixed for his marriage, he found means to escape, and hastened with the speed of lightning to Vevey. Unfortunately the first person whom he en-
