of our Colonial Methodism, has grown up to its present state of efficiency and promise under the constant watch care of our church and it we do not as a people provide for its adequate sustentation in unimpaired and even increased strength we will be guilty of neglecting a duty to which Providence seems to be now clearly calling us. But we will not be so recreant to duty; the intelligent and liberal-minded adherents of Methodism will promptly and generously respond to the call which is now made upon them, to raise an endowment fund which ought to amount to from seventy-five to one hundred thousand dollars.

To put the matter fairly before them we append the preamble and resolution, which were unanimously adopted at the late annual meetquate sustentation in unimpaired and even in-pend the preample and resolution, which were unanimously adopted at the late annual meeting of the Board of Trustees and Governors; Wm. Robinson, 2 and refer to the endorsation which was given and refer to the endorsation which was given to those by the Conference not only by passing the Resolutions which we have given in the last column of the first page of this paper, but by the commencement of a subscription which ensures from the members of the Conference at least one eighth of the maximum sum sought $100,000. Such action shows the profound conviction which has possession of the minds of the members of the Conference as to both the importance of maintaining the Institution and to the absolute and immediate necessity of at once absolute and immediate necessity of at once creating the called for Endowment Fund.

G. Forsyth,
J. Rockwell,

Let the lay friends, who will soon be waited upon by members of the joint Committee appointed by the Board of Trustees and the Conterence to attend to this business, respond to the call with anything like similar liberality, according to their financial ability, and the hunsaccording to their financial ability and the hunsaccording to their financial ability. the call with anything like similar liberality, according to their financial ability, and the hundred thousand dollars will be speedily guaranteed.
