ROGER'S BIRTHDAY PARTY.
"Must I have a party, mamma?" asked Roger, watching his mother as she tried to pick out the very prettiest invitations.
"Why, dear, don't you want a party?" asked mamma in surprise.
"Yes, but not the kind I always have," said Roger. "I'd like to have all the things and then not ask the boys and girls. I could have a nice long party all by myself that way, but now it's all over in one day."
"Would you really like to do that, Roger?"
"Indeed I would," said the little boy. "Just think how long the candy and nice things would last."

fer any to papa and mamma and grandmother.

party it would be, but Roger noticed that she was very busy all the time until the birthday came. Once he asked her if she had invited the boys and girls, but she said she had not, and she told Roger to run away and play, as she was very busy.
On the morning of Roger's birthday he was very much surprised to find a table set just for him in the dining-room instead of his usual place with papa and mamma. There were flowers and candies and oranges on the table and a great, splendid birthday cake with seven candles, and so many nice things that Roger could only open his eyes very wide and stare at them.

But a very strange thing happened next day. A lonely little boy begged to come back to his place at the table and have his bowl of bread and milk, for he said he was tired of having cake and candy and popcorn and oranges all the time. "Please may I ask the children to come their afternoon and have some of my birthday things?" he

"You may have all these things for your own, Roger," said mamma. "You are to have a nice, long party all for your own, and eat whenever you please."
Roger took a large slice of cake and an orange for his breakfast, and all morning he kept running to the table for candies or nice things when he felt hungry. At noon he did not care very much for dinner, and at supper time he had a headache and could not eat at all. During the afternoon several children came in to play, but Roger carefully closed the dining-room door for fear they might want some of the goodies, and he even forgot to of-asked. "I am sorry I was so selfish."

So the boys and girls were glad to help dispose of things and they had a very merry afternoon. "No more long parties for me," said Roger, looking at the empty table. "This kind suits me best."—S. S. Times.
