The ladies' committee consists of Mrs. Arthur Davey, Mrs. Frank J. McDonald and Mrs. George White-Fraser.

As soon as the frost has left the ground the court will be leveled and put in condition for play which will begin the moment the weather will permit.

Another tournament similar to that held last year and the year before will be inaugurated probably some time in June.

FIGHTERS' CORNER

Movements of Sports in Outside World.

Billy Bates, a big, husky looking fellow, whom Billy Brit has brought out as an aspirant for heavyweight honors, dropped into The Times building yesterday and made himself known.

Two rather notable events came off during the past two weeks. One was the signing of articles between Jim Corbett and Jim Jeffries and the other was the acceptance of Sharkey and Munroe of the $10,000 offer for their meeting.

Seven indictments Tacoma, Feb. 27.—Seven indictments have been returned by the federal grand jury and several other complaints are under investigation.

Miners' Convention. Paducah, Ky., March 7.—The reading of Secretary Campbell's report was the chief business of today's session of the miners' convention.

seems to be about the only place in the east that is open to the big fellows now. On Johnson's return he has been offered a match with Armstrong in the Northwest and may accept it.

Eddie Hanlon's father was an interested spectator at the ringside and was disgusted with the decision. He rode home in the hack with his boy after the fight and when he arrived at the house began to tell them all about it.

"What do you think of me boy?" said the proud old man. "The two rounds didn't get me boy down, once in twenty. Oh, he's a lucky man to still have the honor of being a champion after this fight."

An interesting sea race came to a finish Saturday afternoon, when the schooner "Maui" Sherwood, Captain Jesse Smith, came to anchor in this harbor, beating the Lizzie H. Brayton, Captain Howard Kelley, just one hour.

The Brayton is a four-masted schooner and the Sherwood a three-sticker. The final run was from Hampton roads, both vessels leaving their anchorage on Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock, and starting for New Bedford with coal for Gardfield & Proctor.

Those who saw the two vessels heading up for the upper harbor with every sail set, little thought that an ocean race, which had its start from here on January 18, was then being finished, but as it happened it was the finale of a good run between the two vessels.

On Sunday, January 18, the two schooners left here in company for Norfolk, Va., and in consequence of a heavy southeaster both were compelled to make New York for a harbor.

Tacoma, Feb. 27.—Seven indictments have been returned by the federal grand jury and several other complaints are under investigation. Of the indictments returned, two are for alleged violation of the postal laws, two Chinamen are accused of forging certificates of citizenship and three are for selling liquor to Indians.

AN EXTRA... HUSBAND

By Harriet Monroe.

The judge had many stories to tell of his early experiences on the circuit, when Arizona was the happy hunting ground of bandits, Indians, "grocers" and militant cowboys, with a few peaceful citizens thrown in at the risk of their lives to lay the foundations of civilization.

The Arizona statutes were indulgent to the overmarried; they made it easy for a gentleman that had dropped his spouse, for one reason or another, in the states to find a more congenial household deity in the wilds.

But the suit in question was brought for a reason which even the church would consider sufficient. The plaintiff, a rich, middle-aged mine owner, alleged that the defendant, a frowny and slightly damaged lady of forty or less, willed a bit when her husband's lawyer preferred this charge and regained her poise when her own denied it.

"Waal, I thought I knew her twenty years ago," the witness drawled. "How well did you know her?"

"She was my wife," said Timothy, confronting the angry headlike eyes. "May I trouble you to look carefully at the lady—are you sure she was your wife?"

HYPATIA'S BROTHER.

Well, Huntingdon departed at last with the dress suit, the crush hat and a new silk muffler that had caught his fancy.

"I'm simply tired," said Hypatia during a lull at the card club. "I've been hearing men talk about the mean things girls do to one another. As though they ever had a quarter of the superb nerve that helps men lay each other out!"

"Whew!" said the card club. "Who is it this time?" "Well, anyhow," Hypatia continued firmly, "I've studied the subject at first hand, using my brother for an awful example. Why, he is an angel compared to me!"

"State how you know of his death," prodded the lawyer. "I was told he died, and believed he died," said the lady. "An I'm married that that cowboy—what's his name—that was killed by a greaser."

"Do I have to answer that question, judge?" asked the lady, appealing to the gallantry of the court.

"Well, then—five or six times." The incredulous judge was obliged to decide for the plaintiff; and the fair defendant, as she saw the mine owner and his gold departing without so much as a good-bye, was left to meditate upon the folly of having a few husbands too many.

Huntingdon, W. Va., March 7.—The Norfolk and Western coal field was more affected by the strike last summer than any other coal field in the state, 10,000 or more miners, being idle the greater part of the season.

Whom do you suppose Huntingdon had had the nerve to take to the party? He had simply added the girl of my brother's dreams to my brother's dress suit, hat and muffler. He had borrowed the whole outfit. There she sat and never saw my brother. Now that's what I call slamming a friend hard.
