PHOTOGRAPHER'S WAIL ABOUT THE WHIMS OF HIS SUBJECTS.

en, as a Rule, Insist That They Must Be Made Pretty-Folks With Crooked Faces-The Old Lady Who

lace to study human nature than in a otograph gallery," said a well known photographer, the other day. "Of course, you have heard this before; but, really, have experiences that are amusing, even

"For instance, some impossible subject will come in. We will do all that the photographer's skill is enpable of, re-touch, take out the wrinkles and make her as pretty as possible. Then when the sees the photograph she looks grieved, hurt and indignant all at once.
"Why, that doesn't look a bit like me?" she will exclaim. Then, if she has a friend with her, she will turn and say: Well, my coloring is my chief charm, anyway, and, of course, it's all lost in a otograph. Yes, you may send them up, t they're the last I'll ever have taken. "Another type is the woman who 'never expects to have a good photograph, because my features never look so well in repose, but when I talk, don't you know, my face is full of animation.' Of course everybody realizes the truth of this proposition, but every homely woman makes it her excuse and keeps emphasizing it. I much prefer the candor of a young woman who came in the other day and announced that she wanted a pretty picture and didn't care whether it looked like her

"'I'm going to send this away to some relatives I haven't seen for years and will probably never see again, but I want It to look so pretty that they will immediately exclaim, "Why, how Elizabeth has changed!"'

"A man is generally driven to have his picture taken," said another photographer. "The old men are made to come by their daughters and the young men by their sweethearts. You know there is a great fad among young people just now for locket pictures. A girl doesn't hesi-tate at all to say, 'I want a locket picture for my fiance,' while a man will simply say he wants a little picture, until we pump it out of him that it is for a locket. In my opinion very few men care for their own pictures, but simply have them taken when some woman insists on it. They will come in and get the proofs, saying, 'Well, I don't know anything about this, but I'll send back the one that's wanted.' A girl, on the other hand, never wants a man to see her picture until it is entirely finished and all the lines

It is becoming a sort of fad with the best photographers now to make portraits of elderly men and women leaving every line and wrinkle in, and the public is growing to learn the artistic value of this work, which, of course, is a great advance from the stereotyped "pleasant" look of bygone days.

"I am not at all in sympathy with the idea that the public is a fool," said another prominent artist who has photographed many celebrities in his long professional career. "An artist is supposed from his experience and education in art to be better able to dispose of lines and but the public pays the freight and cer-tainly has rights that a photographer should recognize. Many subjects, however, are blind to their peculiarities or faults, and it may surprise you to learn that the human face is rarely a perfect bit of symmetry, the two sides often dif-fering widely. But that is a long story. Even families do not know of peculiar distinctions in the faces of their own usehold. I once took a photograph of a lady whose face was remarkable in this respect, the difference between the corincular and corner of the mouth being fully half an inch. I did all that my skill could suggest in lights, posing? etc., but could not conceal the unsymmetrical lines. When she saw the proof, she threw it down indiguantly, exclaiming, 'Surely my face is not crooked!'—But it was. "I have found little difference in the degrees of vanity in men and women," con-tinued the photographer. "The surprising element entered when a plain old farmer who probably had not looked into mirror for a generation came in for a photograph and became not only fussy and obstreperous, but very critical. "It is very hard for some to know they are growing old. Once a woman of 55, with very kittenish ways, came to me. I studied her face carefully, for I knew she did not realize her looks. Finally I made her portrait, copying one of Sir Thomas Lawrence's paintings. Then we retouched and retouched again, removing every line and wrinkle and shadow. The resuit showed a young woman, surely not 25. I was actually shamefaced over it and wondered how she would take it.

She looked at it critically. "Well, really, Mr. Photographer, I feel encouraged. I always do look old in my pictures, but if you'll just retouch this a little'-

"Members of the dramatic profession are so educated and drilled in posing that are so educated and drilled in posing that they surpass all others as a class. Public men usually look off it as a duty to be executed as promptly as possible. They realize that it is better to be strong than comely. Yet a great many have a great regard for their clothes. Only recently I photographed a very distinguished man. The likeness was excellent, but in the left coat sleeve was a wrinkle, and on account of this he insisted on sitting again."

Warning to Parrot Lovers,

FUN IN ADVERTISING

A noticeable feature of the China newspapers is the "exuberant verbosity" of their advertisements. This is due to cheap advertising rates, as well as to the flowery language of the Kingdom. All sorts of communica-tions get into the papers, but the business system of Chinese editors is so admirable that instead of airing private and public grievances in "letters to the editor," they are inserted in the advertising columns, and thus help the editor to get an honest living.

An announcement inserted by a filted swain whose lady-love eloped with Chou Ling, closes with these heartfelt words: "I cannot control my wrath and bitterness. My loved one has, it is plain, been enticed away by this rascal's deceit. How, I wonder, can a mere tailor's dummy like this succeed in winning her? Surely he has not law or justice before his eyes. It is on this account that I am advertising. Should any kind-hearted gentleman give me information of her whereabouts by letter. I will reward him with $20; should he bring her back to her parents, I will joyfully give him $40. I will most certainly not eat my words. His kindness and benevolence for a myriad genera tions, to all eternity, shall not be forgotten." A mother writes to a son who has run away from home: "If you delay longer and do not return, I cannot bear it, and shall most surely seek an end to my life, and then you will stand in peril of death by thunder. I am now at my last gasp, and the family has suffered from insults most grievous. If you come, no matter how, everything is sure to be arranged. I have thought of a plan by which your father may still be kept in ignorance. My life or death hangs on the issue of these few days. Only I pray that all good people everywhere will spread this message abroad, so that the right person may hear of it. So will they lay up for themselves boundless store of secret merit."

Another advertisement for a missing son says: "My second son, Huai Po, a boy of tender years and no parts, was educated at home in the country, and had no knowledge of the world. Even when we came to Shanghai last year he stayed indoors learning his lessons, and never left the house until September 26, when he went out to get cool and never returned. I ought to say that the boy was altogether unacquainted with Shanghai and the character of the people, and I presume he has been decoyed away by rascals for some bad purpose. The gold charms he wore will not, I am afraid, be sufficient for his necessities; on the contrary, he will be borrowing money or doing something of the kind. In that case I will not hold myself liable. Should any of my relatives or friends see him him to return at once, and so will they earn my gratitude. But I shall pay no monetary reward." Quacks in China advertise in more America. One such "ad" runs: "Our recipe has come down to us from a physician of the Ming Dynasty. A certain Mandarin was journeying in the hill country, when he saw a woman passing southward over the mountains, as though flying. In her hand she held a stick, and she was pursuing an old fellow of a hundred years. The Mandarin asked: 'Why do you beat that old man?' She answered: 'He is my grandson, for I am 500 years old, and he 114. He will not purify himself by taking his medicine, and so I am beating him.' The Mandarin alighted from his horse, and knelt down and did obeisance to her, saying: 'Give me, I pray you, this drug, that I may hand it down to posterity for the salvation of mankind.' Hence it got its name-'Fairy Receipt for Lengthening Life.' Take it for five days, and the body will feel light; take it for ten days, and your spirits will become brisk; for twenty days, and the voice will be strong and clear, and the hands and
