The Earthquake.

Quite a heavy shock of earthquake was felt early on Monday morning in Wolfville, but reports from elsewhere point to the fact that it was comparatively light here. About two o'clock in the morning a number of householders were awakened by the shaking of their houses and the rattling of pipes, chandeliers and other fixtures. No damage has so far been reported from any locality where it was felt. A Boston despatch says that beginning at St. John, N. B., the seismic vibrations traversed through the state of Maine, causing some damage to buildings in Augusta, Portland and Bangor. The shock was felt plainly as far south as Taunton.

Harvard officials say that the shock was the most severe since 1884. From Augusta, Portland, Waterville, Lewiston and Brunswick in the state of Maine, similar reports have been received, and in Manchester, N. H., the shock was quite severe. The time given scarcely varies, 5 to 10 minutes past two o'clock in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick and about the same time past one o'clock—the difference in time—in New England. At Fredericton, N. B., it seems to have been most plainly felt although nothing worse than shaken buildings and broken bric-a-brac has been reported. The shock lasted about fifteen seconds and is considered the most severe ever felt here.
