This Excelsior Dramatic Club of Summerside gave an entertainment in the Market Hall of that town on the evening of July 2nd. The attendance, owing to the Salvation Army Umbrella procession and other attractions, was poor. The few present expressed themselves as highly pleased with the performance, the leading features of which were Mr. Watson Clarke's Dutch and Negro impersonations, Mr. James Hickey's Irish comicalities, the singing of Mesars. McSeween, McLellan and Kenny; Mr. W. S. Bowness' Trombone Solo, Mr. J. P. Wright's recitation of "Eugene Aram's Dream," and the music by the Grebesira. The same programme was repeated in Kensington Hall a week later, on the 9th inst, to a very fair audience, who pronounced the concert to have been the best ever given in Kensington. Here, as in Summerside, Mesars. Clarke and Hickey brought down the house by their comical rendition of the farce "Silmmes Twins." The only thing that marged the evening's enjoyment was the conduct of the Kensington hoodiums, who assembled as mass as a secult of the two concerts the club found themselves financially in the same position as when they organized, some four months ago, and having schieved all the glory they could bear up units, disbested.
