A san accident occured, in Doolan's quarry, Mount Edward Boad, yester day afternoon, by which a man named Robert Douglass lost his life. It appears that the unfortunate man, together with Doolan and a man named Macdonald were in the act of loading a stone, at the bottom of the quarry, which is about eighteen feet deep, when a large quantity of clay and stones fell from the top. Macdonald was almost buried in clay, and Doolan was knocked down and somewhat in-jured. Poor Douglass, who was in a stooping posture, was struck on the back of the head by a falling stone which brought his head in contact with the stone over which he was bent, thus mpletely crushing his scull between es. He lived but a few the two sto minntes. A Coroner's jury was sum-moned, who, on hearing the evidence, rendered a verdict in accordance with the above facts. Douglass was a young man but lately married.
